NEWS BRIEFS

NFL Checks Parilli Death

CHICAGO (AP)—A salesman told authorities Thursday he was severely beaten by Tony Parilli in a New Year's eve brawl that resulted in the fatal shooting of the former college and professional football player.

Parilli, 24, former University of Illinois star later associated with the Chicago Bears and Washington Redskins, died from a bullet which a police chief said he fired accidentally. The shooting occurred in a washroom scuffle during a party at the suburban Willowbrook Bowling Lanes. Mike Ditka, a Chicago Bears end, is part owner of the lanes.

Du Page County authorities have termed the shooting accidental but said a grand jury investigation will be conducted to determine if any charges should be filed.

In Miami, the National Football League announced it would conduct its own investigation.

Big Wheat Sale To Reds Begins

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Continental Grain Co. has sold nearly 13 million bushels of durum wheat to Russia for more than $25 million, grain sources said Thursday.

Such a transaction would mark the first sale of wheat to Russia under a program announced by the late President Kennedy.

Continental registered a subsidy in Washington on 350,000 tons of durum wheat.

Since the government has granted a subsidy to export, the source said, the assumption is that only Russia could use that quantity of durum wheat. That particular type of wheat is used largely to make macaroni and noodles. It is grown in Minnesota, Montana and the Dakotas.

Whether the sale will be consummated is not known.

Cons Sit Down; Warden Waits

POINT OF THE MOUNTAIN, Utah (AP)—About 450 of the 700 inmates of the Utah Prison went on a sit-down strike Thursday and authorities planned to just let them sit.

As they missed their second meal, the prisoners told officials they wanted more and better food, longer hours in the combined gymnasium-arts and crafts room.

Assistant Warden G. M. Fitzgerald said the Inmate Council listed the complaints seven hours after the strike started.

Fitzgerald said the men were locked in their cells when they refused to go to their work assignments by 9 a.m.

Cooks joined in the sitdown, and the men missed their noon and evening meals.

Trio Indicted In Sinatra Case

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A federal grand jury Thursday indicted three men on kidnaping, conspiracy and possession of ransom money in the kidnaping of Frank Sinatra Jr.

U.S. Atty. Francis Whelan said in making the announcement that the FBI cracked the case before the arrest of the three suspects.

There have been reports that one of the three, John William Irwin, 42, volunteered information that led to arrest of the two others. Irwin reportedly turned himself in.

Tries To Halt Mummers Parade

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A former State Supreme Court justice tried Thursday to obtain injunctions against mummers who will parade Saturday and against those who threaten to picket them if blackface marchers participate.

The former justice, Thomas D. McBride, is co-chairman of the Mayor's Civil Rights Committee.

He filed a petition in Common Pleas Court 5 "because of the possibility of widespread disorder and rioting." No time was set for a hearing.

Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market took its first bow for 1964 Thursday amid brisk buying and sharply rising prices.

The Dow Jones industrial average made a fairly good gain of 3.13 at 766.08.

Volume was fairly live at 4.68 million shares compared with the 6.73 million in the unusually heavy yearend session.

5,000 To Be Cut From Postal Rolls

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP — President Johnson was reported Thursday night by high authority to have decided on a budget somewhere around $100 billion for the next fiscal year.

And it was announced that he is sending Pope Paul VI a personal letter to be delivered during the pontiff's pilgrimage this weekend to the Holy Land.

Johnson also received details on a big new housing program to be submitted to Congress and word that the payroll and the red ink are going to be reduced in the Post Office Department.

And just before dusk, Johnson got a chance to relax. He went by helicopter to the Haywood Ranch, in which he has a partnership, and cruised Lake Travis in his speedboat.

The new budget has been hovering around $100 billion for some time — but what Johnson has called built-in increases threatened to push it to around $102.5 billion or $103 billion.

Officials said the President now has been able to slash away enough potential spending to whittole the figure to the neighborhood of $100 billion.

The late President John F. Kennedy sent Congress a $98.8-billion budget last year.

As for the message to the Pope, White House press secretary Pierre Salinger announced that the chief executive signed a message to be taken to the pontiff by Sargent Shriver, director of the Peace Corps.

Shriver will be touring various Middle East countries. He leaves Washington Friday.

The pledge of postal economy came from Postmaster General John A. Gronouski, who said employment and the department deficit would be reduced without impairing mail service.

Housing Administrator Robert C. Weaver outlined to Johnson —and later to newsmen—plans to offer legislation to stimulate housing for families of all income levels. It would be spread over several years.

Weaver described it as "a large and significant program" but declined to be specific about how many units or how much money is involved.

In telling newsmen of his economy pledge to Johnson, Gronouski said at this time no increase is contemplated in postal rates other than a $77-million boost for parcel post now awaiting action by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Gronouski met with newsmen at an Austin, Tex., press center after conferring with Johnson. The postmaster general said he assured the President that in the next six months—the last half of the 1964 fiscal year—his department, the government's biggest employer of civilians, will lower its rolls by 5,000 workers to a total of 590,000.

Extended over a full year, he said, this reduction would save $30 million in payroll expenses.

But apparently it won't extend far into the 1965 fiscal year which starts next July 1.

Butz: County Lucky

STROUDSBURG—The superintendent of highways for Monroe County said yesterday his department employs enough men and equipment to keep all major highways in the county open during a severe snowstorm.

Morgan Butz said county residents were "very fortunate" to have all major arteries open during the New Year's day snow and sleet storm.

State police at Stroudsburg and Mt. Pocono, last night reported that driving conditions were generally bad throughout the Pocono Mountains region.

Police said Interstate Rt. 80 and Rt. 611, north from Scotrun were in a very slippery condition and urged extreme caution while driving on these roads.

Complaints Registered

The Daily Record received several phone calls yesterday reporting bad driving conditions at Analomink Hill on Routes 191 and 196 and on Rt. 209, from East Stroudsburg to Marshalls Creek.

The callers complained these stretches of road were in generally bad condition with a lack of cinders causing the most trouble.

Slippery roads caused a major traffic tie-up during the storm Wednesday night on Rt. 80, at the East Stroudsburg interchange.

Cars were backed up for several hours from East Stroudsburg to the Delaware River bridge at Water Gap and from Stroudsburg to the Prospect St. bridge.

Butz said that snow removal on new Rt. 209 and Interstate 80 takes priority over all other county roads. "However," he said, "we have enough men and equipment to take care of the other main roads in the county."

He said he has orders from Harrisburg telling him to keep all county roads open at all times. "We have 90 men and 40 pieces of equipment that we send out as soon as the first snow falls," he said.

Butz said this regular complement of men and equipment was out fighting freezing highway conditions during all of recent storm. He said his men will stay on the job until all county roads are cleared.

Asks World Leaders To Join In Pact

Khru Proposes Peaceful Territorial Disputes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Premier Khrushchev was reported Thursday night to have proposed to President Johnson and other world leaders that they join in a pact pledging not to use force to settle territorial disputes.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk confirmed that Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin delivered Thursday a Khrushchev message to Johnson concerning "the peaceful settlement of territorial disputes."

But Rusk declined further comment on the 20-page document, saying it was in Russian, was still being translated and the U. S. government would "give it very careful study."

Same Message

Similar messages were sent by Khrushchev to other government heads around the world in what appeared to be a Kremlin bid to seize the initiative in the new "peace offensive" of 1964.

U.S. sources said Khrushchev has proposed a convention, or pact, which could be signed by all nations which would subscribe to it.

The nuclear test-ban treaty also has been open to signing by all nations.

U.S. policymakers waited translation of the full text to determine complete implications of Khrushchev's proposal.

Rusk said that if Khrushchev is suggesting that territorial disputes should be settled "by peaceful means rather than by war, it would appear to be consistent with long-established policy and practice by the United States."

More Study

However, he refused at a news conference to go into more detailed observations about the idea without further study.

Khrushchev's message came hard on the heels of friendly exchanges of New Year's greetings between Johnson and the Soviet leader.

Rusk Sees Thaw In '64 Cold War

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk pictured 1964 Thureday as a year when long-deadlocked cold war issues may start moving out of deadlock.

He said the Western Allies will begin soon an intensive search for new solutions on the major issue of divided Germany, dramatized by the Berlin wall.

Rusk told a news conference there already are discussions in progress about how to keep open the tiny holes in the Berlin wall opened during the Christmas holidays.

The Western powers are seeking an arrangement which would allow East Berliners to visit West Berlin, he said, in addition to continuing to permit West Berliners to visit the Eastern section.

So far the Communists have only allowed West Berliners to come to the Communist sector, and this holiday privilege is scheduled to end Sunday.

It was Rusk's first formal news conference here since President Johnson took office. His last previous meeting with newsmen was Nov. 8.

Rusk reviewed what he termed the mixed prospects for peace in 1964.

He said Southeast Asia and Cuba present dangerous situations. But in the broad field of East-West relations, he sees hope for improvements in the new year.

"Certainly an intensive review will be made of the complex of problems known as the Germany and Berlin issue to see whether new initiatives might be promising in that situation, and that is something on which the Allied governments will be working intensively in the weeks immediately ahead," he said.

The secretary rated disarmament high on the U.S. list of peace priorities in 1964. The 17-nation Geneva disarmament conference is slated to reconvene Jan. 21.

Traffic Deaths Still Climb

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Safety experts blamed the weather, in part, Thursday for a toll of 232 dead in traffic accidents during the two-day New Year's celebration.

The number of fatalities during the 48 hours of Tuesday and Wednesday was higher than expected, especially in the Midwest where clear, cold weather lured motorists to the highways in great numbers.

"Much of the severe weather occurred in Southern and Southeastern states which normally have low New Year's tolls," said Howard Pyle, president of the National Safety Council. "But this unaccustomed change tended to increase deaths there."

Pyle said at least 12 states had traffic fatality increases over last New Year's figures.

The New Year holiday toll, although less than the 316 of the 48-hour Christmas holiday, was far higher than usual for a December Tuesday and a January Wednesday, which averaged 163 in the latest Safety Council statistics.

Johnson Names New Ambassador

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson announced Thursday he plans to name longtime diplomat Ellsworth Bunker to be U.S. ambassador to the Organization of American States.

"His assignment to this post," the President said in a statement, "is in line with our desire to carry on and strengthen this government's relations with the countries of the hemisphere."

"The OAS is an important instrument in the maintenance of political and economic stability in the hemisphere," Johnson said.

Bunker, currently a consultant to Secretary of State Dean Rusk, has devoted much of his time recently to Latin-American affairs. He replaces deLesseps Morrison in the new post.

Bunker has served as ambassador to India, Italy and Argentina, and in 1946 served a term as president of the American Red Cross.

Castro Fires New Blast At Johnson

HAVANA (AP)—Fidel Castro charged Thursday President Johnson is responsible for a Christmas Eve explosion that damaged a Soviet-built torpedo boat and killed several Cuban crewmen in waters off the Isle of Pines.

Blasts at the United States faced a 2-hour, 17-minute speech by the bearded prime minister in a celebration of the fifth anniversary of his revolutionary triumph over Dictator Fulgencio Batista.

Castro declared the sabotage operation off the Isle of Pines was handled by U.S. Central Intelligence agents from Florida, hence President Johnson is guilty.

A Cuban anti-Castro group called Commando Mambises claimed responsibility through a spokesman in Tegucigalpa, a few hours after the attack.

Cypriots Agree To Talk Peace

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Greek and Turkish Cypriots agreed Thursday night to a London peace meeting with Britain, Greece and Turkey in an effort to end the communal strife on this eastern Mediterranean island.

The meeting was arranged by Britain's Commonwealth relations secretary, Duncan Sandys.

The conference will be held in London late in January, a Nicosia government announcement said.

The government added that the conference will review the four-year-old British - Greek-Turkish settlement that created the Cyprus republic within the British Commonwealth. Cyprus had been a British colony until 1960.

A spokesman for Greek Cypriot President Archbishop Makarios was the first to announce the meeting. A confirming announcement by Turkish Cypriot Vice President Fazil Kutchuk quickly followed.

Apparently Sandys had worked out the five-sided meeting while still in Cyprus. He flew back to London Dec. 28 after working out a cease fire between the Cypriot Greek majority and the Turkish minority, a cease fire that is still being patrolled by British troops.

Fighting between the two sides erupted two weeks ago after Makarios announced he was seeking ways to change the constitution.

The announced London meeting came a day after Makarios had announced intentions to scrap the treaties binding Cyprus to Britain, Greece and Turkey because the Cyprus government was unworkable.

Berliners Ready For Wall Talks

BERLIN (AP)—Mayor Willy Brandt's West Berlin government made preparatory moves Thursday to approach the East German Communists on keeping the Red wall open after the special holiday visiting period ends Sunday.

Brandt had a round of meetings with officials of his government and with Erich Mende, vice chancellor and minister of all-German affairs in the West German government, a city spokesman said.

They reportedly discussed what should be covered in a new round of negotiations with the East Germans. West Berliners hope the arrangement for passes to visit relatives in East Berlin during the holidays can be made permanent and broadened to include visits to friends.

About 44,000 Berliners beat the possible last-minute rush by hurrying to East Berlin for reunions with relatives.

Only three days before the last scheduled visiting day, Allied sources described the situation as very delicate. They said it was uncertain whether the visiting period would be extended.

One Allied official said, however, that the West Berlin Senate "is not as forthcoming with information on what it intends to do as it might be."

The Western Allies—the United States, Britain and France—have been the rulers and protectors of Communist-surrounded West Berlin since World War II.

They have shown serious misgivings about the deal West Berlin's city government made on its own with the East German Communists for holiday visits across the wall — and about the prospect of more such bargaining with the Reds.

Jordan Awaits Pontiff

JERUSALEM, Jordan Sector (AP) — King Hussein says all Jordan awaits the Holy Land pilgrimage of Pope Paul VI with warmth, affection and enthusiasm and he hopes it will herald a new era in relations between Moslems and Christians.

"It is my earnest hope that eminent spiritual leaders of our two great faiths will take concrete steps with a view toward achieving this blessed, historic objective," the 27-year-old Moslem monarch told a crowded news conference Thursday.

Hussein saw no possibility, however, that the Roman Catholic pontiff's visit could better relations between Arab nations and Israel, the Jewish state that is, like Jordan, a keeper of Christian shrines.

The king addressed about 400 newsmen in a movie theater of the old Walled City, which buzzed with preparations for reception of the Pope. Workmen put up yellow and white Vatican flags and the black, green and white standards of Jordan. Strolling the streets were desert troops assigned to help guard the pontiff.

A jet fighter escort, a 21-gun salute, presentation of an olive branch and release of flocks of white pigeons are arranged for Jordan's welcome to the Pope on his arrival Saturday at Amman, its capital.

Though Pope Paul is to tour holy places of both Jordan and Israel on his three-day pilgrimage, the king said he believes there is no political implication and "I can hardly see how Arab-Israeli relations could improve."

Jordan was among the Arab foes of Israel in the Palestine war of 1948, a war halted by U.N.-sponsored armistices but never ended by treaty. Many of the more than a million Palestinian Arab refugees of that conflict live in Jordan.

Asked if Jordan would accept papal mediation if it is offered, the king said this question has not arisen, but commented that the Israelis must "remedy the wrongs they've committed."

Hope Fans For Downed Servicemen

HONOLULU (AP) — Mysterious signals fanned hopes Thursday night that nine men aboard a missing four-engine military cargo plane that went down 50 miles west of Hawaii may still be alive.

Search plane crews said they heard SOS signals at various times over the past few hours. However, they had not ascertained the source or location of the signals.

No trace of the C124 Globemaster has been found.

About 20 search planes were in the area, according to the Air Force at Hickam Air Force Base at Honolulu.

The missing plane, carrying a crew of eight and a Navy man accompanying the corpse of a sailor en route from Japan to the United States for burial, apparently ran out of fuel.

A radar-picket destroyer escort left Pearl Harbor Thursday afternoon for the search area.

After a refueling stop at Wake Island, the Military Air Transport Service plane continued its flight toward Honolulu and was due at Hickam at 1:39 a. m. Thursday.

Humphrey Edges Kennedy In Democratic Poll

NEW YORK (AP)—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota has topped a national poll of Democratic county chairmen as the party's best choice for the vice-presidential nomination in the 1964 elections. Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy was a close second in the poll, taken by The Associated Press.

Humphrey received 185 votes and Kennedy 166.

Mrs. John F. Kennedy and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, youngest brother of the late president, also received some votes for the nomination — indicating Democratic leaders' belief in the political magic of the Kennedy name.

About half of all the county chairmen declined to express a preference. Some said they had made no decision, others replied that President Johnson, assuming he is the presidential nominee, should make his own choice of a running mate.

Top Ten

Associated Press correspondents polled the county chairmen and other Democratic leaders during the last three weeks of December. Of more than 20 persons mentioned, the top 10 after Humphrey and Kennedy:

Adlai E. Stevenson, ambassador to the United Nations—75.

Robert F. Wagner, mayor of New York City—47.

Sargent Shriver, head of the Peace Corps and a brother-in-law of the late president—43.

Edmund G. Brown, governor of California—37.

Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota—28.

Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff of Connecticut—24.

Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., assistant secretary of commerce, —21.

Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri—14.

The bulk of Humphrey's votes came from the Middle West, but he had some support in virtually all parts of the nation.

In naming him, the most frequently cited reason was that a "Northern liberal" will be needed to balance the Democratic ticket next November. Much the same thinking was expressed by those who said they think the attorney general will make the strongest running mate for Johnson.

"I feel in my own mind that they will nominate Bob Kennedy," said Fred G. Klunk of Adams County, Pennsylvania. "He has done a tremendous job as attorney general. Geographically, it would be a tremendous asset to the party to have Johnson from the South and a running mate from the Eastern part of the country."

Stevenson Backer

In Massachusetts, Edward P. Grace of Fall River said he favors Stevenson but he called Humphrey "a formidable candidate."

A Kennedy backer in the attorney general's home state gave as his reason—"The name —they usually go after things they want—they are pleasing to the public—they have charm, grace, brains. I think Kennedy's nomination would help President Johnson a lot."

Mrs. Kennedy was mentioned by chairmen in Rhode Island, Kansas and Kentucky for the nomination. In Kentucky, Bowling Green Mayor R.D. Graham said, "There is some talk that the GOP is planning to nominate Margaret Chase Smith, senator from Maine, as their vice-presidential candidate. If they do, then I think the Democrats should nominate Mrs. John F. Kennedy."

Ted Too

Although he has been in the Senate only a little more than a year, Edward M. Kennedy's nomination was advocated by some chairmen in Montana, Oregon, Kansas, New Hampshire, Missouri and Alabama.

In Texas, President Johnson's home state, Shriver and Humphrey each received three votes and there were two each for the attorney general, Wagner and Ribicoff.

Symington said last week he is not interested in the vice-presidential nomination. In the poll of leaders in Missouri, the senator led all others. He said, when advised of the results, "I certainly appreciate that honor. But I am entirely disinterested."

U. S. Steel Consolidates

PITTSBURGH, (AP) — U. S. Steel Corp. made another move in its reorganization program this week by consolidating two facilities producing pipe and tubing with the operations formerly under the now-defunct National Tube Division.

U. S. Steel said the new unit will be known as Tubular Operations and will be supervised by E. B. Speer, an administrative vice president-steel operations, with Paul C. Ely directly in charge as vice president-tubular operations.

Under the plan, the company said, Tubular Operations will control all facilities formerly operated by National Tube. In addition, the unit will be responsible for the former Central Furnaces of American Steel and Wire Division in Cleveland and the Youngstown (Ohio) District Works of U. S. Steel.

Speer is a native of Pittsburgh who has been with U. S. Steel since 1938. He has served as an administrative vice president — steel since November, 15.

Ely, a native of Monessen, Pa., joined National Tube in 1927. He had been a vice president-operations at National Tube since 1961.

Lippi Released From Hospital

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — August J. Lippi of Exeter, president of District 1, United Mine Workers of America, was discharged Thursday from George Washington University Hospital in Washington. He had been a patient there since suffering a heart attack while attending a UMWA meeting in Washington last month.

Lippi and two other defendants in the Knox Coal Co. case were scheduled to be sentenced in Federal Court at Lewisburg Dec. 17 but sentencing was postponed indefinitely because of Lippi's hospitalization.

Lippi and Mrs. Josephine Sciandra of Exeter, were convicted April 13, 1962, of evading more than $80,000 in corporate income taxes owed by the now defunct Knox Coal Co., Port Griffith. Louis Fabrizio, Yatesville, president of Knox and also a defendant, pleaded guilty just before the trial and also is awaiting sentence.

Radar Signs Under Fire

EBENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — A Cambria County judge ruled Thursday that radar signs on state highways reading "Radar Enforced" are invalid.

Judge William D. Shettig said in an opinion sustaining the appeal of a Johnstown motorist that the radar law of 1961 requires that signs be posted if radar is in operation, not just if the highway was radar enforced.

"Had the legislature meant only that the signs were to indicate that radar possibly could be in operation then the choice of the wording is improper," Judge Shettig said.

"We can come to no other conclusion but that the legislature intended. . .that the signs must indicate that the speed of vehicular traffic is being timed on a particular highway and at a particular time," he continued.

Judge Shettig ruled in favor of Cyrus G. Fornwalt of Johnstown who had received a 30-day suspension of his driver's license on a charge of driving a tractor-trailer at 55 m.p.h. in a 40 m.p.h. zone on Route 30 near Bedford on April 24, 1962.

Commonwealth attorneys said they will file exceptions to the ruling.

Shapp Enters Race For U.S. Senate

HARRISBURG (AP) — Philadelphia industrialist Milton J. Shapp announced his candidacy Thursday for the U.S. Senate on the theme of economic growth and a more peaceful world.

Shapp told a breakfast news conference he would run for the Democratic nomination in the April 28 primary with or without the endorsement of the party's executive committee.

"This decision stems from long interest in programs to promote the economic and social well being of people," the 51-year-old president-founder of the Jerrold Electronics Corp. declared.

But if he fails to survive the primary, he pledged "absolute" support of the man who is nominated.

Shapp promised a "vigorous campaign" to unseat Sen. Hugh D. Scott, R-Pa., who is expected to be nominated for re-election.

His announcement came just 48 hours after State Sen. William J. Lane, D-Washington, declared himself available for the Democratic nomination.

Shapp viewed the job of beating Scott as a "tough one."

"But I am confident this journey I am starting today will end up down in Washington," he added. "The only way you can beat him (Scott) is with a long campaign, underlying his failure in congress to do anything at all for Pennsylvania. You could say Scott has done a lot, but what has Hugh done for you?"

Shapp said he would stress in his campaign the issues of jobs, civil rights and a stable world for peaceful existence.

Probe Asked On Strip Mines

HARRISBURG (AP) — The closure of 92 bituminous strip mine operations until they qualify under Pennsylvania's new licensing regulations was ordered by the State Mines Department Thursday.

Mines Secretary H. Beecher Charmbury said the order means the operators must hall their activities until licenses are issued. Under a new 1963 strip mining act, licenses were required on Jan. 1.

The orders were sent to all operators who have not received licenses, but had filed quarterly tonnage reports. The tonnage reports mean that the operators have been mining within the past three months.

Charmbury said the orders were sent out Tuesday. A strip mine operator's license costs $300. They must be renewed each year.

Nkrumah Escapes Bullets

ACCRA, Ghana (AP)—A gunman entered the home of President Kwame Nkrumah and fired five shots in a vain attempt on the Ghana leader's life, the government reported Thursday. A security guard was mortally wounded but Nkrumah escaped injury.

The assassination attempt was reported made as the 54-year-old president prepared to leave his official residence, Flagstaff House. All five shots were fired at close range but none hit Nkrumah.

First news of the assault was carried by Ghana radio, which said the assassin was in police custody.

On Aug. 1, 1962, a bomb exploded near Nkrumah's car in a village 560 miles northeast of Accra, killing four persons and injuring 56 in a crowd on hand to greet him.

It was widely reported then that Nkrumah was injured but this was denied, although Nkrumah was not seen in public for some time.

Within a few weeks of that attempt, two bomb blasts were reported at his home and the death toll mounted to 15 but Nkrumah escaped unhurt each time. On Jan. 8 last year another bomb attempt on his life was reported.

In March, five persons were sentenced to death on charges arising from the August 1962 attempt on the man whose followers call him "Osagyefo," or "The Redeemer."

The State of Pennsylvania was so named in honor of Admiral Sir William Penn, father of William Penn. It means "Penn's Woodland".

Vandels Mar Yule Spirit At ESSC

EAST STROUDSBURG — Dr. LeRoy Koehler, president of East Stroudsburg State College, said yesterday that the college may have to take action in an effort to curb "ever increasing vandalism."

The latest in a series of juvenile vandalism incidents at the college was the removal of the lights from a large Christmas tree that is displayed every year on the college's front campus.

"Some boys took the lights and smashed them. We usually leave the tree up until after the New Year, but this time we had to take it down early," Dr. Koehler said.

He also said someone stole the college sign a few weeks ago and broke into the gymnasium and took four sets of skin diving equipment.

"No Trespassing"

Dr. Koehler said that if the vandalism continues the college might be forced to post "no trespassing signs" on all college land. He said it is impossible to patrol the entire campus with the limited security staff the college employs.

He said the college has no objection to groups of children coming to visit the campus. "In fact we welcome this type of activity. However, we can't tolerate this vandalism we are having," he said.

Chimney Soot Fire Extinguished

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg firemen were called yesterday at 2:46 a.m. to extinguish a chimney soot fire in a home occupied by Richard F. Granville at 346 N. Ninth St., Stroudsburg.

Nelson Lightner, fire chief, said that an old fire place in the home had been covered with plywood. A stove pipe from a room heater was directed to the chimney.

According to Lightner soot from the chimney had fallen behind the plywood and ignited it. He said that damage was minor.

Sale Of Hotel Completed; New Owners Reveal Plans

By Gil Murray
Daily Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG—A glittering new transportation center and hotel will be made out of the American House Hotel, one of Stroudsburg's oldest landmarks.

The hotel, located at 757 to 765 Main St., was bought yesterday by Edward A. Katz and Samuel M. Monatt, both of Stroudsburg, from Boyd F. and Charlotte Weiss.

The sale price was $125,000.

Atty. Walter Olenick, Stroudsburg, represented Katz and Monatt and Atty. Arlington Williams, of Stroudsburg, represented the sellers.

Katz and Monatt, doing business as Monatt, Inc., took over the operations of the hotel on New Year's day. Mrs. Virginia Stetler will manage the hotel, travel service and bus service.

The Stroudsburg Travel Service, controlled by Katz and Monatt, will be located in the renovated building and will offer all types of travel service and travel tickets all over the world.

The new firm will also handle all Greyhound and Martz-Trailways bus service to Stroudsburg.

Liquor Store

The Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board announced in December that it would open a State Store in the hotel building.

Monatt, Inc., will invest more than $100,000 to improve and develop the property, according to the new owners.

"We will probablly have available more than 10,000 square feet of air-conditioned, modern office or commercial space for rent," said Katz.

Katz said the hotel would definitely be maintained.

"I would like very much to emphasize, for the comfort of our present guests and tenants at the hotel that we will do everything possible not to disturb them.

"We will modernize the American House and will install an elevator to service all the properties and additions," said Katz.

Katz said yesterday that the restaurant and snack bar in the hotel have been leased to Mr. and Mrs. Donald Trueheart of Stroudsburg. They took over operations yesterday.

The Truehearts operated the Blossom Hill Restaurant on Rt. 22 in New Jersey for many years.

The American Hotel property includes three buildings facing Main St. at 757, 761 and 765, and a garage on three lots between Main St. and Eighth St. and Bank Alley and the Colonial Diner property.

It also includes a building occupied by the U. S. Army Reserve Sub-Center at 753 Bank Alley, a parking lot next to it on Eighth St., and a house behind the reserve center facing Ann St.

The renovation of the entire building will begin in January or early February. The Ann St. property will be remodeled into two modern apartments and the property at 761 Main St., will be demolished.

Vocational Training

The extension of free public education from high school to two years of college was proposed Wednesday by a national committee of educators. It may very well come some day.

But a more pressing national and local need is vocational training of youth not interested in or suited for academic training, and the vocational retraining of adults who never learned a skill or lost their jobs to automation.

In an effort to create interest in a vocational training program or school in Monroe County, the Industrial Management Club is sponsoring a panel discussion next Tuesday night at the Penn-Stroud Hotel.

Stephen Sworen, industrial arts and technical training advisor in the state Department of Public Instruction who surveyed Monroe County's vocational needs in 1960, will b the main speaker.

Monroe County school and political leaders will also speak during the panel discussion. The public is invited at 7:45 p.m.

Both Pennsylvania and the federal government have within the past year adopted major new legislation to support with grants vocational training institutions at high school and adult levels.

This legislation is an answer to the pressing national problem of more and more unskilled young people unable to find work because they are not trained to do the new jobs created by modern industry or many of the basic "old jobs."

The same problem of automation and new types of jobs is creating unemployment at the adult level.

These are not far-away problems, invented by politicians in Washington or Harrisburg. They are real and human and immediate and close at home.

The panel discussion Tuesday night should throw some light on how Monroe County can meet the problem of training workers young and old. It is time to begin serious study of the issue.

Slow Highway Clearance

The New Year's Day storm which dumped two to five inches of snow on the Pocono Mountains and then coated it with sleet and freezing rain caused the worst possible driving conditions in Monroe County.

Morgan Butz, superintendent of state highways for Monroe County, said he had a full crew of 90 men and 40 pieces of equipment out clearing major state highways.

But the effort was inadequate.

Butz said that snow removal and sanding of the new Interstate Rt. 80 and new Rt. 209 south toward Wind Gap take priority over other state highways.

But many motorists spent several nightmare hours on Interstate Rt. 80 unable to climb slippery inclines between Stroudsburg and Delaware Water Gap Wednesday night until highway trucks arrived late with sand.

The new four lane highways in Monroe County have added many new burdens to the county highway department.

Perhaps bigger storm crews are needed and perhaps emergency standby crews should be called in faster.

If the new four lane highways are receiving "priority" treatment during and after snow storms, then the level of highway maintenance is not very high. In several recent storms, major lanes and approaches to Interstate Rt. 80 have not been cleared within reasonable periods of time.

Less important state roads are receiving even less prompt attention. The treacherous hill at Analomink, for instance, was not sanded Thursday morning, many hours after the Wednesday night storm had ceased.

The state highway department deserves a certain amount of sympathy and patience from the public. Its job is not easy.

But if 90 men cannot do the job, then the department should call out emergency crews, or hire the necessary additional help. It is too important a job, dangerous to the public if not well done and quickly.

New German Spirit

By Walter Lippmann

WASHINGTON — The meeting in Texas between the Chancellor and the President has marked a notable change in German - American relations. Previously when the Germany Chancellor came to the United States, the prime purpose of the visit was to obtain from the President another pledge that the United States would be faithful to its pledges.

In Texas, the old pledges were reaffirmed: the United States will not withdraw its troops from German territory, and it will not negotiate a settlement of the German question without the advice and consent and participation of the Federal Republic.

But that was not the interesting part of the Erhard visit. For there is really no doubt whatever that this country will honor its pledges.

The real point was to receive from the Chancellor assurances that this is the beginning of a new era in German affairs and to give him in return public encouragement and support as against the remnants of the old regime.

The central and crucial theme of German - American relations is the search for a workable formula which will bring about the reunification of Germany. Such a formula is bound to bring with it a greater reunification of the European continent.

The reason why German-American relations were never stabilized under Chancellor Adenauer is that he insisted that we reiterate a formula which made it impossible to reunify Germany without precipitating a world war. Dr. Adenauer always felt that he needed to be reassured we still adhered to this dangerous, and therefore incredible, formula.

There is good reason to think that Chancellor Erhard and Foreign Minister Gerhard Schroeder intend to move, insofar as the Adenauer remnant can be assuaged or overcome, on the only line of policy which can lead peacably to the reunification of Germany and of Europe. The change began as Adenauer lost his absolute majority in September, 1961. That was two years before the new government took office.

It is being promoted vigorously by the new government, and its actions are more convincing than the words which, as yet, Messrs. Erhard and Schroeder deem it expedient to use. This is most evident in the change in German relations with Eastern Europe.

When Adenauer had an absolute majority during the Fifties, the Federal Republic was bound hand and foot by the so-called Hallstein Doctrine that Bonn would have no diplomatic relations with any government (except that of the Soviet Union itself) which had diplomatic relations with East Germany.

The Hallstein Doctrine has not been formally disavowed. But it is being circumvented, and Bonn now has trade missions headed by a diplomatic officer in several countries of Eastern Europe.

This is a major move toward European reunification, and it is one of the essential preliminaries to the eventual reunification of the two Germanys. For as economic, cultural and political intercourse increase between the two halves of Europe, there is bound to be growing intercourse between West and East Germany.

There is, one might say confidently, no other path than this one to the reunification of Germany. The Adenauer policy of non-recognition and as little intercourse as possible could never lead to reunification. It assumes the unbelievable, namely that the Soviet Union will surrender unconditionally East Germany to the Federal Republic.

This is so highly unlikely that there has always been reason to question the sincerity of the Adenauer theory of reunification and to wonder whether he did not prefer a divided Germany.

The policy of growing intercourse between the two parts of Germany and the two halves of Europe depends upon the assumption, surely a reasonable one, that if the two kinds of Germans can mingle and can trade, can work together and can play together, they will find a way of uniting — unless they are prevented by one or several of the great powers.

Therefore, it seems to me that a sound American policy on Germany requires a policy toward Russia which will induce the Soviet government to accept, if possible even to encourage, the eventual reunion of the German nation. I do not think this is impossible.

In Eastern Europe, as I have observed it, the only serious opposition to German reunification within the 1945 frontiers stems from the fear that the German army will obtain nuclear weapons. That is one more reason, added to many others, why it is unwise for us to push a reluctant Europe into the multi - lateral nuclear force.

There is in circulation -- we might say in the suburbs of the White House -- an agrument that Britain is weak, that France is intransigent and that therefore we must promote the West Germans to fill the vacant role of our very special ally. This fantastic notion, which would treat as of no importance the history of the English - speaking peoples during the past three centuries, appears to have been explained to Mr. Erhard.

No Room For Scranton?

By Mason Denison

HARRISBURG — Reporter's Notebook:

Governor Without A Desk? — There was minor consternation around the gubernatorial suite for a time this week when reports had it Governor Scranton would return forthwith to his office. The consternation was not so much an earlier-than-scheduled return of the "boss" (from the proverbial cat-and-mouse standpoint) as it was: What the nuts do we do with the Governor?

Reason for the brief flutter in the front office was that the Governor has been in absentia from Capitol Hill since the beginning of Christmas week for a holiday vacation and not expected to return until January 6 . . . It was this absence that permitted programming the redecoration of Mr. Scranton's private office.

This week there was nothing in the Governor's office as the redecorating program moved ahead as scheduled. Even the Governor's desk was out of the room — and had he returned earlier this week the poor chap simply would have had no place to go! . . . For once there just wasn't room for the Governor, suh . . . There was some talk about setting up a card table and a stool in the hallway as an emergency measure — until it was discovered there wasn't a card table around . . . (After all, you don't play cards on Capitol Hill!)

Costly Legislative Fudging— When the regular 1963 legislative session earlier in the year couldn't scrape together the required two-thirds votes to pass the $72 million in state aid appropriations for Keystone State hospitals, colleges and universities the action (or inaction) forced many of these state aided facilities to borrow carry-over funds at (added cost) interest . . . Heavily subsidized Penn State University was one of the bigger victims of the legislative fudging, just how much so, amply illustrated by the following:

When Governor Scranton called the Legislature into special session last month for the specific purpose of acting on these non-preferred state aid appropriations a letter from the university to lawmakers underscored the seriousness of the situation, pointing out that without approval of the appropriations, Penn State would have to:

(1) Borrow about $2 million each month;

(2 Postpone salary increases for faculty members (resulting in losing some);

(3) Reduce the number of students that could be admitted;

(4) Delay use of classrooms and laboratories;

(5) Postpone a number of critical research projects.

(The special session, it will be recalled, quickly approved the overall $72 million state aid package.

. . . Wild Blue Yonder, Etc. — Three educational specialists from NASA (National Aeronautics and Space Administration) recently visited the Department of Public Instruction to review DPI's role in developing the most effective use of the Spacemobile lecture-demonstration and other educational services in Pennsylvania schools.

The visitation was not without reason — Pennsylvania was selected as a pilot-project for this development program . . . In fact a number of schools throughout the state during 1962-63 had the opportunity of attending the Spacemobile lecture - demonstration on rocketry and space science.

More is in the offing, for beginning this month and continuing through May the Spacemobile already has been scheduled for upper secondary schools in 25 counties of the state . . . It is estimated that by the end of this tour, approximately 200,000 secondary pupils will have witnessed the presentation.

The Big Dry-Up — Thirty-one Pennsylvania communities were forced to find emergency water supply sources because of record low water levels during the drought of last fall, according to the Department of Internal Affairs, forcing communities to turn to springs, lakes, quarries, wells and streams to replace normal sources.

The Allen-Scott Report

Johnson's VP

Paul Scott

WASHINGTON, January 2— Very cagily but unmistakably, President Johnson is starting to take soundings on his possible running mate in this year's election .

So far these discreetly cautious probings have been confined to veteran Democratic leaders with whom the President has long been on intimate terms. Undoubtedly, they will be expanded as developments warrant.

Meantime, while giving no hint of his own thinking, Johnson is leaving no doubt about two highly significant points:

While seeking the views of others, he intends to exercise the determining voice on who the No. 2 candidate will be; at present, his list of most likely potentials consists of five names in the following order:

Senate Democratic Whip Hubert Humphrey, Minn., who spearheaded the 1960 preconvention drive against the late President Kennedy. Humphrey battled him unsuccessfully in torrid primaries in Wisconsin and West Virginia — with backstage help from Johnson. Had Johnson won the nomination, Democratic insiders took it for granted Humphrey would have been his running mate. The two men have been close ever since.

Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver, exceptionally personable, able, wealthy and ambitious, whom a high-placed Johnsonite graphically described as "having the great advantage of being of the Kennedys (brother - in-law) without being a Kennedy." Shriver definitely plans to leave the Peace Corps by spring to embark on a political career.

UN Ambassador Adlai Stevenson, still the glamorous idol of a considerable following, particularly liberals. Johnson has high regard for Stevenson's abilities, and the two men get along well.

Mayor Robert Wagner, far more eager to be Johnson's running mate than to run against hard-to-lick Republican Senator Kenneth Keating. Wagner's difficulty is getting the solid backing of the big New York delegation. Upstate Democrats are far from enthusiastic about him. But he is definitely in Johnson's good graces. To boost his prospects, Wagner is considering a drive for the vice presidency.

Attorney General Robert Kennedy, who has a surprising degree of backing in influential Negro and liberal circles. Personal relations between Johnson and "Bobby" have markedly improved since the former became President.

"Bobby" would never be Johnson's first choice for running mate, but neither was Johnson the late President's first choice. As the time-worn saying goes, "Politics often makes strange bedfellows."

Significantly, the President's initial soundings have been among his old congressional cronies, notably in the Senate and among Southerners. He has also talked to some businessmen whose judgment he rates highly.

Since entering the White House, Johnson has agreed to make only one major political speech — the March 10 congressional fund - raising dinner in Washington.

Still under consideration are similar affairs in Miami, Chicago, and Los Angeles.

Goodbye, Tootsie, Goodbye— It looks like the ax for Walter Heller, head of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

President Johnson is displaying marked coolness to this Kennedy hold - over. White House insiders are predicting the one - time Minnesota University economics professor is slated for early replacement.

Significantly illustrative of Johnson's attitude toward him is the following:

During the President's stay at his Texas ranch, an aide informed him Heller was on the phone "with an important message." Johnson, immersed in a conference, scowled and shook his head. Later, the assistant told him Heller still wanted to talk to him.

"You tell him," snapped the President, "that if he wants to do that, he can come to Austin, get a hotel room, and wait his turn. So far as I'm concerned, I don't care if I never see that fellow again."

The late President Kennedy at times displayed annoyance with Heller. But there was no indication to drop him.

Politicals — President Johnson left a trail of ruffled feelings among some top New York City politicos following his speech at the United Nations. While brushing them off to confer on the state's snarled Democratic affairs, he attended a two - hour cocktail party by a woman publisher whom the politicos strongly dislike.

All the miffed political leaders were strong Kennedy supporters. . .Former Ohio Governor Mike DiSalle is in the running for Democratic National Chairman when incumbent John Bailey is eased out by spring. DiSalle's friends claim he stands high in Johnson's favor.

Dear Abby

About Face!

DEAR ABBY: I read a letter in your column from a married couple who had been counseled during some marital difficulties by their clergyman. They said there was no mention of a fee, so they didn't know whether to wait for a bill or to send him a check to show their appreciation for his help. You replied, "Since no fee was mentioned there probably was none. Send a check to the church for their building fund or missionary work. Churches can always use money."

Well, what about clergymen? They can use money, too, and most of them need it desperately. It was like telling people if they want to show their appreciation for the fine service they had at a hotel to send a "tip" to Conrad Hilton. Please reverse yourself.

A CLERGYMAN'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Now that you put it that way I think you're right. I am hereby reversing myself.

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl who is almost 14, and I like a boy who is 15. He acts like he likes me when there is nobody around, but as soon as he gets with his friends, or when anyone else is there, he acts like he doesn't care anything about me. But when I look at him it is as though his eyes are saying, "I love you." What does this mean?

THRILLED

DEAR THRILLED. It doesn't mean a thing, Honey. In this case, the "eyes" don't have it. What does his MOUTH say?

DEAR ABBY: When I was 17 I married a man 37. We had a son, and stayed married for six years. After we were divorced I met a man my age and we were married. My ex-husband and I remained friendly because of our son. My ex-husband got sick and asked if he could come to live with us until he got better. My husband said yes. I took care of him. Well, it has been eight years and he's still here. He is now 77 and drinks seven nights a week. He gets a pension and also some income from property. My husband drinks with him and won't work any more. Now I have two drinking men in the house, nobody works, and we all live off my ex - husband. Can this problem be solved?

WEST VIRGINIAN

DEAR WEST VIRGINIAN: Yes. And it's your move. Move your ex - husband out, and give your husband a chance to be a man. And if they're both too blind to find ALCOHOLICS ANONYMOUS in the telephone book, it's the first listing under "AA".

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "Borrowed Time," the gallant lady who was dying of cancer and wanted to know if she should marry the man who was begging her to, could have included an additional suggestion. That she and her friend should write their congressmen and senators that they would rather have a cure for cancer than a man on the moon. If you print this, sign me,

Speaking Of Your Health:

Fireproofing Fabrics

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Fireproofing of clothing, bedding and draperies may soon be a life-saving process built into the actual fabric.

A flame retarder has been developed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Quartermaster Corps. This new chemical process fireproofs, cotton, wool, rayon, silk and combinations of these materials.

Fabrics are doused with the chemical agent and then put through a special drying process at extreme temperatures until "cured."

No Allergy

Treated in this manner, the fabrics have caused no toxic, allergic, irritating or respiratory problems when in contact with the body. The materials show no change in appearance or durability. In fact, besides being fire resistant, they also seem to resist shrinkage, mildew, rot, and even wrinkling, with this new treatment.

Repeated washing of the fabrics does not alter the effectiveness of the fireproofing.

The preliminary studies with this remarkable "built - in-safety" in clothing offer new and great hope for extra protection against fire.

Hope For Bleeders

Hemophiliacs (bleeders) have been helped by another of the lucky "accidents" that have benefited man throughout the history of medical discoveries.

Dr. Johann Erik Jorpes of Karolinska, Sweden, unexpectedly discovered a blood factor that was missing in the blood of congential bleeders.

This anti - hempohilia factor (AHF) actually halted the serve hemorrhages that threatened the lives of the bleeders.

Safer Surgery

Important operations, delayed because of the possibility of abnormal bleeding, can now be more safely performed.

Dr. Jorpes and his colleagues were concentrating on a different though related aspect of the blood - clotting mechanism when the AHF factor in clotting was uncovered.

The discovery of AHF has opened vast new areas for the study of the entire blood-clotting mechanism.

For hemophilicas there now is hope that their lives may be continued without the constant threat of uncontrolled hemorrhage.

Fight Against Staph

The staph (staphylococcus) germ has for the last two decades been building up its defenses against antibiotics. It has in devious ways taken on characteristics that identify it as being drug - resistant.

The staph has been a subtle yet constant threat in hospitals, operating rooms and clinics.

An all-out, no-holds-barred battle has been waged by scientists against the formidable staphylococcus that had refused until now to yield to modern medicine

Stories Behind Words

SANDWICH

Sometimes a person becomes so engrossed in some activity that he hates to take time out to eat. Such was the case with John Montagu of England, the fourth Earl of Sandwich.

Montagu, who lived from 1718 until 1792, liked to play cards so much that he hated to quit long enough to go to the table and eat.

He could have had a meal spread on the card table, but that would have disrupted the game. He solved the problem by placing slices of meat between two pieces of bread. In this way he could play cards and eat at the same time.

This arrangement of meat and bread became known as a "sandwich", after Montagu's title, Earl of Sandwich.

Do We Have Too Much Freedom?

EDITOR'S NOTE — Recent events have stimulated Americans to take a questioning look at national morals and habits with a view to discovering what impels our modern society. In this article written for The Associated Press, a distinguished American philosopher - historian offers his personal opinions on these and other timely subjects.

By WILL DURANT
Written For
The Associated Press

May I raise my head out of the 18th century and speak my piece about the 20th?

In the period which I am studing—the last decades before the French Revolution—the individual was struggling to liberate himself from ancient traditions, concealed creeds, and despotic states. Therefore he idealized freedom against order, the new against the old, "genius" against discipline. And when his rebellions succeeded, he tried to establish constitutions that would weaken the state and the church, and strengthen the rights of the individual.

The attempt failed for a time in France because a quarter-century of war re-established discipline and monarchy; it succeeded in America, and Jefferson gloried in a government that would govern as little as possible.

Protection Of Law

Throughout the 19th century in England and America, and after 1870 in France, the aim of law, in large part, as to protect the individual against the law to make it difficult to arrest a suspect or to convict an innocent man. Most of our literature and social philosophy, after 1850, was the voice of freedom against authority, of the child against the parent, of the pupil against the teacher, of man against the state.

Through many years, like any unplaced youth swelling with genius, I shared in that individualistic revolt. I do not regret that rebellion; it is the function of youth to defend liberty and innovation, of the old to defend order and tradition, and of middle age to find a middle way. But now that I, too, am old, I wonder whether the battle I fought was not too completely won. Have we too much freedom? Have we so long ridiculed authority in the family, discipline in education, rules in art, decency in conduct, and law in the state that our liberation has brought us close to chaos in the family and the school, in morals, arts, ideas, and government? We forgot to make ourselves intelligent when we made ourselves free.

Insanity Excuse?

Should we be free to commit murder and escape punishment on the ground of "temporary insanity?" Have our parole boards been too gentle, humane, and approachable? Should we be free to sell, to any minor who has the price, the most obscene—the most deliberately and mercenarily obscene—book of the 18th century while we deplore the spread of crime, unwed motherhood, and venereal disease among our youth?

Should divorce be so easy that marriage loses its function of promoting sexual order and family discipline? Should advertisers be free to multiply their sales by pictures of violence, or by persuasive propaganda for products officially branded as injurious? Should a few old men be free, by the accident of seniority, to obstruct government by preventing Congress from considering measures recommended by the president?

These are difficult questions, requiring careful thought, and I have no dogmatic answers to any of them. I know that severity of punishment does not always prevent crime—though I believe that surety of punishment would deter it. I know how hard it is to say who should judge what is right or wrong, obscene or decent, and where censorship should stop once it has begun. I realize that the old moral code, designed for an agricultural society in which marriage came early, children were assets, and the family was the unit of economic production, is inevitably breaking down in an industrial and urban society where marriage is deferred, children are liabilities, the individual and the corporation are the units of production, and the protective anonymity of the individual in the city crowd hampers the functioning of public opinion as a moral check and stimulus.

But with all these excuses and doubts, public opinion has been guilty of criminal and cowardly silence in the face of growing crime, moral disorder, and deteriorating taste. We have been afraid to speak out lest we be considered old fashioned and incapable of adjusting ourselves to changing norms and ways. We tolerate, and allow our children to be formed by, pictures that habituate them to crime and violence, to the heroism of flaunting a gun, and to taking the law into their own hands. We patronize products sold by appeals to the lowest common denominator of the public mind. We make ideols of screen celebrities who deliberately break up home after home. We give not only money but honors to writers who peddle sexual stimulation. We pass in wonder by some of the modern art exhibited in our museums, and we dare not speak out against it as turning our stomachs with the odor of decay. Our ears are deafened and cacophonous music, but we fearfully recall that Beethoven was condemned by traditionalists, and without protest we go to be deafened and insulted again. We hear the wits laugh at the old copybook maxims, and we haven't the nerve to say that those maxims are still true.

Presidential Possibility

Scranton leads The State With New Ideas, Programs

By JACK LYNCH
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG (AP — Pennsylvania's new-look gvernor led the Commonwealth through an exciting and prosperous year in 1963.

And in the process, William Warren Scranton established himself as one of Pennsylvania's brightest presidential possibilities in a century.

The vigorous 46-year-old Republican unleashed a flood of new ideas and concepts that shook staid, old Pennsylvania to its foundations.

His activities, from dancing the Charleston at the inaugural ball to a host of promotional ideas with the Madison Avenue touch, brought cheers from most Republicans and Democratic complaints that the governor might be more flash than substance.

Unemployment Drops

The unalterable fact is that Pennsylvania's unemployment and relief rolls dropped during the first 11 months of the Scranton Administration.

It must be left to the experts to determine how much of the improvement should be credited to Scranton and how much is a direct result of the nationwide economic climb.

Scranton made little headway in his economy efforts during the first six months because he was operating under a budget left from the Democratic Lawrence Administration.

Budget, Cost-Cutting

But from July through November, the Scranton Administration claimed to have slashed operating costs by 2.8 per cent, from $39.2 to $38.1 million.

Much of the saving was accomplished by reducing the state payroll from 81,000 to 79,000. The governor also ordered the line held on salaries, although there were some exceptions that stirred cries of favoritism.

He sharply restricted coffee breaks and parties and demanded more courtesy to persons having dealings with the state.

Full Day's Work

The governor insisted on a full day's work from every employe and went so far as to have golf courses watched for workers playing on state time.

During the period there were

Gov. William Scranton

26,200 hirings for state jobs, indicating the firing of holdover Democrats was near to that figure. Still there were complaints from Republican leaders that the governor was not moving fast enough on patronage matters.

The state's overall unemployment total dropped from 430,000 persons in January to 294,000 in Nbvember. The decline was from 9.4 to 6.4 per cent of the total labor pool.

The number of persons requiring public assistance also declined, from 467,904 to 423,930 persons.

Sales Tax Up

Scranton increased the sales tax from 4 to 5 per cent, but he doubled the appropriation for attracting new industry to the state and provided the money for the first school teacher salary increase since 1957.

Along with the cigaret and liquor tax increases, the sales tax levy boosted state general fund revenues, exclusive of highways, an estimated $65.8 million.

Scranton initiated a sweeping advertising program in national periodicals, formed councils on business and industry and science and technology and the Committee of 100,000 Pennsylvanians for Economic Frowth.

Within the government, Scranton created an interdepartmental clearing council to help cut red tape for businessmen dealing with the Commonwealth.

State Publicity

Scranton would go to almost any length to attract publicity for the Commonwealth.

He agreed to almost every request for a promotional picture, many of which made the front pages around the nation.

His promotion-minded aides dreamed up the "controversy" with the state of Kentucky on whether the frontier rifle carried by Daniel Boone, a Keystne State native, should be called the Pennsylvania or Kentucky Long Rifle.

Pennsylvania lost its claim in a formal shootff, but Scranton scored a bullseye with the ancient rifle in the proceedings at the old Boone homestead near Reading.

On the wohle, Scranton can look back on 1963 with satisfaction.

He went into the new year at the head of a government in the black with virtually no prospect of new taxes and as one of the bright young men of the Republican Party, who just might become the GOP candidate for president at the convention in July.

Campus Sex Freedom Debated Across America

EDITOR'S NOTE — Mixed — and often wild — dormitory parties have created concern in colleges and universities across the land. Here is a report on sex on the campus, based on a nationwide poll by Associated Press correspondents.

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Staff Writer

SEX I—and probably II, III and IV—is still a popular subject on the college campus, even though it's not listed in the catalogue and students get no credits for passing the course. In fact, concerned parents will be happy to know, most colleges still devote considerable time and energy to erecting a fence of rules and regulations between their lusty males and nubile coeds.

The subject came up the other day at Harvard.

Harvard Freedom

Fair Harvard, it seems, permits its students to entertain women in their dormitory rooms for a total of 35 hours a week. There are indications that some of the entertainment would startle the city censor in nearby Boston.

"Trouble has arisen," said Dean John U. Munro, "because what was once considered a pleasant privilege has come to be a license to use the college rooms for wild parties and sexual intercourse."

At the same time, Helen E. Clark, dean of women at the University of Maryland, tightened up rules that let undergraduate women, with permission from their parents, spend nights off the campus.

"A number of instances of student partying in apartments, considerable imbibing of alcohol and lack of moral behavior have been drawn to our attention," Miss Clark said.

This fall, tiny Earlham College — 945 students — in Richmond, Ind., revoked Sunday visiting priveleges for men and women students. Too many doors were being closed.

MIT Laxity

Few colleges are as liberal as the Massachusetts Institute of Technoloy, where women are allowed to visit men's dorm rooms 58 hours a week and the only rule is the Interfraternity Council suggestion that "promiscuous activity should not be permitted."

The colleges that take the most benign attitude toward boy-girl relationship are concentrated chiefly in the Northeast. Some have got their fingers burned.

Yale allows dorm room visits on weekend evenings. They were permitted during the week, too, until 1960 when 20 students were allowed to resign or were disciplined for importing a 14-year old girl from a nearby town for nightly dorm visits.

Goddard College, often described as an experimental school in Plainfield, Vt., allows coeds and men students to mingle unchaperoned in dorm rooms up to 9 p.m. Girls are never required to check in and out of their own dorms.

"We have a few serious incidents, now and then, as every college does," says Provost John Hall, but generally it works out well."

Strict Rules

But not well enough, apparently, for Dean Forest K. Davis has asked the student body to think over the current visiting rules with an eye toward changing them at the end of the current semester.

Many colleges that prefer not to take the risks are located in the South and Midwest.

"We may be old fashioned," said Catherine Carmichael, dean of women at the University of North Carolina, "but we take the view that one little girl ought not to be alone in one little boy's room."

The theory that there is chastity in numbers is widely held. Johns Hopkins University, an all-male school in Baltimore, permits weekend dorm room visits, specifying that if one couple is present the door must be open; if two couples are present it may be closed but not locked.

Fraternizing between the sexes in dormitory rooms is forbidden at North Carolina and Tampa but boys and girls are permitted to mingle occasionally in the social rooms.

Student Protests

The college rules have drawn protests, support and noncommittal shrugs from the students.

At Williams College in Williamstown, Mass., the school paper assailed Harvard's Munro as "absurdly righteous" and consigned him "to the Puritan Heaven where collected martyrs to their faith peep at each other through keyholes."

The University of Utah forbids women to visit men's dorms but there is little student protest. W. David Smith Jr., 21, editor of Utah's Daily Chronicle, thinks he has discovered the reason.

"Why should they worry?" he says. "There are plenty of places to go off capus if they want to."

Las Vegas Showgirls Vie With Broadway

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Three bare-breasted show-girls descended from the ceiling on small, suspended discs.

They didn't know it, but they were pushing a trend that one day may force Las Vegas to compete with Broadway in the show field.

Down on the stage, the curtain rose and dozens more girls —some clad elegantly, some almost invisibly — threaded through intricate maneuvers amid flashing lights and crashing music.

It was the spectacular and opulent opening of the newest edition of the Stardust Hotel's Lido de Paris French revue.

The three bare show girls revolved slowly on their platforms in a bath of light.

On the sprawling stage, the size of a basketball court, the show moved massively through its two hours.

It was studded by such unexpected touches as:

The startling, whirring flight of a covey of doves from a spotlight booth to the stage.

Tropical Island

A tropical island destroyed by fire and a hurricane.

A live white horse and rider, galloping in the basement and reflected to the audience by a huge mirror.

A circus with performing seals and flimsily caged tigers.

An ice duet, and a grand finale featuring costumed and half-costumed girls perched in the backdrop while fireworks spread sparks behind them.

The Stardust installed the new show, with a cast of 70, even though the previous edition was drawing 1,000 persons twice nightly—three times on Saturday—every day of the year.

Business was so good, in fact, that the half-clad showgirls are forcing a transformation of the Las Vegas show philosophy.

Spectacles

Other hotels are hinting that they may go the spectacle route blazed by the Stardust and the Tropicana. The Thunderbird has already switched to a stripped-down Broadway show theme.

The Dunes, after a half-year flirtation with "Guys and Dolls," is installing a French revue.

Why should the plush strip hotels abandon a policy that has made the neon a shrine to the star system?

Stan Irwin, entertainment director at the Sahara, said the performers who can fill showrooms can make more money in movies and television. The tax bite, spread out by percentage deals is smaller than on their $20,000-up weekly Las Vegas Wages.

Irwin said he'll keep the star system in 1964. But by 1965, he says the Sahara probably will build a Broadway-size stage.

If the spectaculars fill up the main showrooms, where will the singers and the comics go? Into the lounges.

Las Vegas already is famous as the place where the lounges feature stars who would headline anywhere else:

Sarah Vaughan, Harry James, Billy Eckstine, Ray Anthony, Della Reese, Louis Prima, Lionel Hampton, Billy Daniels. They may draw $5,000 to $8,000 per week.

Barry, Rocky, Romney In Race

Barry To Tell

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Sen. Barry Goldwater, a city councilman just 15 years ago, will tell the nation Friday whether he will seek the 1964 Republican presidential nomination.

The Arizona senator will announce his political plans at a news conference at 11 a.m., Mountain Standard Time, on the lawn of his hilltop home in Paradise Valley, an exclusive residential suburb of Phoenix.

His Senate colleagues, most political observers, and apparently his own Washington staff, are convinced Goldwater is ready to challenge New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, the only other announced candidate, for the nomination.

The senator's staff sent a telegram to Goldwater reading: "Happy Birthday, New Year and November." Goldwater was 55 on New Year's Day.

He will meet with Arizona Republican leaders briefly before talking with newsmen. For the benefit of television and radio he will read, uninterrupted, a two-page statement. Then he will call for questions.

Goldwater still will be wearing a cast on his right foot, an aftermath of surgery to remove a calcium deposit from his heel. The senator, however, probably will be able to walk unaided, tossing aside the crutches he has been using.

Goldwater, long the spokesman for the Republican conservative wing, was the front runner for the nomination in a recent AP poll of county chairmen. His margin of support, however, has dipped from a poll taken before the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Fifteen years ago Goldwater was prodded into his first political campaign—for the Phoenix City Council. He won and by 1952 was capturing a U. S. Senate seat from the incumbent Ernest McFarland.

Goldwater's second 6 - year term ends in 1964. Under Arizona law he could be listed on the ballot for both president and senator. But Goldwater has said he would not run for two major political offices simultaneously.

Rocky Campaigns

CONCORD, N.H. (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York resumes his quest for the Republican presidential nomination with one eye cocked toward far-off Arizona.

The governor is returning Friday to New Hampshire's political battleground on the day that Sen. Barry Goldwater is scheduled to announce in Phoenix, Ariz., whether he too, will seek the nomination.

Rockefeller entered New Hampshire's March 10 first-in-the-nation presidential primary. His backers indicated that they still look upon Goldwater as the governor's No. 1 opponent.

Former Gov. Hugh Gregg, the Rockefeller campaign chairman here, issued another challenge for Goldwater to meet. Rockefeller in a series of public debates.

He said he was doing so on the eve of "Goldwater's long-delayed decision to announce his candidacy."

"Already it is obvious that a face-to-face clash between these two candidates could be the best medium for presenting the facts to the voters of New Hampshire," Gregg said.

Rockefeller's visit will be the third he has made since he announced his candidacy, and the first since he imposed a political moratorium after the assassination Nov. 22 of President John F. Kennedy.

He is scheduled to fly from New York City to Pease Air Force Base at Portsmouth, where he will deliver what his aides have called "a major address" before a Young Republican Club dinner Friday.

He will go to Concord, where he will spend the night, then go on a brief hand-shaking tour Saturday morning. The governor will also hold a news conference and entertain newsmen and their wives at a "brunch" before flying back to New York about noon.

Romney Not Out

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Michigan Gov. George Romney, whose national image has had the ups and dows of a political roller-coaster, doesn't count himself out of the national picture.

But Romney is not referring to speculation that he might be the 1964 Republican presidential nominee. The governor has steadfastly maintained that he is not a candidate and will not become one.

"I'm concerned about the national picture," Romney said in an interview. "And properly so, because after all, what happens nationally has an important bearing on what happens to Michigan."

Romney, Michigan's first Republican governor in 14 years, has not announced whether he will run for re-election.

Best guess among most Lansing observers is that he will try for at least one more two-year term, despite his occasional expressions of distaste for politics. He is a former president of American Motors, soared last spring with adoption of the new State Constitution, which he helped to write as a delegate to the Constitutional Convention.

Romney lists its adoption as the No. 1 achievement of his year-old administration.

But his leadership image suffered a severe blow this fall when the Republican-dominated Legislature failed to adopt the fiscal reform program for the state, frequently beset by financial troubles although now enjoying a booming economy.

Foreground is the Garden of Gethsemane and the Basilica of Gethsemane, center, near road running across picture. In distance, among the trees, is Russian Church of Mary Magdalene and at top left is the Mount of Olives. Just Between Us — —

—By Bobby Westbrook

I hate to remind you but yesterday was the day you said you were going on that diet. Well, I know you don't want the rest of the fruit cake, Christmas cookies and candy going to waste but you were the ones who set the deadline for dieting, not me.

The reverse is happening to the calendar of local events. After the long, lean holidays, the calendar is again beginging to grow fat and life seems to be returning to a routine after what Ruth Brown claims was "two weeks of Thursdays."

It has been a confusing time with the holidays in the middle of the week and in addition to not knowing what year it is for writing checks nobody seems to know what day of the week it is for their meetings, either.

As long as I'm in a reminding mood, I'll remind you that next Monday is the first Monday of the month and you know what that means. It means meetings galore begin and never cease. Best idea might be to get out your Ann Logan calendar and by making a little check on each day as it comes you'll not be going to the Garden Club board meeting when it's Woman's Club board meeting day.

Actually most of us, I think, rather welcome a return to routine but when the tendency is also to make-up for the lavish holiday meals by serving economy-type menus at the same time that the Christmas tree decorations come down leaving the house strangely bare, combined with the military insistence on early bed-times and back-to-the-books for the children, the austerity program may seem a little harsh.

But not for me. Tomorrow, I'm off for the National Press Fashion Week in New York of which you'll be hearing plenty. Right now I've been trying to get up the courage to put myself through a minute car wash, fully clothed, as the only way to get both of my outfits clean and ready to go at the same time.

New Status Symbol: Child May Suffer As An Ornament

By Joy Miller
AP Women's Editor

New York (AP) — Are you a Good Mother?

Do you have the best-dressed, — fed, — educated, — mannered, — medicated, — cultured and adjusted child on your block?

Do you buy him toys that are age-graded for children several years older because you're sure he's that smart?

Do you just know he's Ivy League material?

If you've nodded happily four times, steel yourself for a jolt. You might be one of the mothers Martha Weinman Lear has written a book about — the mothers who use their children as status symbols and make parenthood a competitive sport, in short, "The Child Worshipers."

About four years ago Martha Weinman was working for the New York Times. One story she wrote was, she says, "meant to be a mild spoof on mothers who keep their children looking spiffy" to the tune of $200 dresses for 4-year-olds, $1,800 little-girl mink coats, wispy "training bras" in size 28AA for girls of 10 or younger.

A psychologist, to whom she had appealed for some light on this relatively recent phenomenon of making clothes-horses of the very young, explained it this way: The child is being used to express the parents' station in life; the mother is wearing the child as a beautiful accessory, as a status symbol.

Intrigued, Martha decided to find out more. She started her book while still with the Times, then got a leave of absence to do research. She was married a year later to Dr. Harold Lear, but kept on with her project. "It took me better than three years," she says, "with last year pretty much writing."

In her research she sought out areas where competitive parenthood was practiced most flagrantly: schooling, children's camps, pediatrics, social areas.

"I can't say that it's sweeping across the country," Martha says judiciously, "but it's important because it's a trend. Like in home decoration or fashion or child-rearing it starts in pace-setting communities among people well up on the social and economics scale. They're usually well-educated; some are full of psychological jargon such as 'peer group', 'sibling rivalry', 'socio-economic status.'

"The trend will sift down through the ranks, as permissiveness did some years back."

Martha admits that most of this kind of pressure — to make your child the very best — is probably good "That is, if it's the push for the child to realize his potential, and not the push to satisfy parents' drives. If parents fulfill themselves through their kids instead of going off and fulfilling themselves on their own hook, the push is destructive.

"I don't mean to intimate that any of this is very conscious — although it sometimes may be — or ill-intentioned. The parents love the child, but they want to be the best parents by having the best child."

Some of the results, she says, may be very serious — such as ulcers in small children.

"The child is the victim," she points out, "but it is a pretty exotic way to be a victim, getting the best of everything, whether or not it's best for him."

What's to be done?

"The feeling of experts," she says, "is that there seems to be no solution per se, but it must come as a willingness by mothers who do this worshiping sort of thing to realize something is wrong with it. There must be a heightening of self-confidence so that mothers aren't so eager to depend on their children and not so competitive with other mothers. The mother must find herself in terms of her own capacities instead of her child's."

Fair Number Of Jobs Still Available At World's Fair

By Roberta Fleming Roesch

Now is the time to think about the job you'd like this summer!

Some of the young folks are doing that, too — in Christmas-vacation talk. And one of the jobs they're talking about is work at the coming big attraction — the soon-to-open New York World's Fair to be held from April 22 to October 18, 1964, and from April 21 to October 1, 1965.

Needs Time To Look

"I can't think of any place in the world where working would be more fun," a bright-eyed college junior said only yesterday. "So as soon as I get a little time I'm going to try for a job."

We wish her luck — since it will be fun to work in this world fairyland!

But the fact remains — if you think so, too — that you'd better get busy right now, because if you wait till you have the time you may miss the boat to the Fair!

Actually over 30,000 people will have jobs at the Fair. But many of them have already landed jobs there.

HQ Fully Staffed

The Fair Corporation itself, for example, is fully staffed at its headquarters in Flushing, and no part-time or temporary help will be hired. From California, Walt Disney, who's hiring at Disneyland for some of his creations at the N.Y. Fair, reports the jobs are going fast.

By the same token, Greyhound at the World's Fair, scheduled to furnish guides, bus drivers and the like, informs us: "Because of the tremendous volume of job applications, we have already ceased accepting applications from women."

With this in mind, the password is "Rush" if you want to work at the Fair.

And these are some of the jobs you may find if you get on the job for a job.

(1) cashiers, ticket sellers, ushers and ticket takers; (2) guides, bus drivers, tractor train operators, conductors, telephone information clerks and information and booth attendants; (3) policemen and firemen; (4) first-aid-station doctors and nurses.

Besides these, there'll be openings for maintenance and utility personnel. Exhibitors, restaurateurs and concessionaires will also hire employees. If you would like a list of job possibilities, send your request to the World's Fair Headquarters at Flushing, New York.

States' Status

At the moment, many of the states with pavillions at the Fair are taking job applications.

New Hampshire, for instance, is lining up people in that state who are familiar with its economy and attractions. And Texas is hiring both teenagers and college students who'll be trained to answer any questions about Texas or the Fair.

A letter to your State House will furnish you facts on your state.

(If you'd like further information on where to apply for jobs at the Fair, send me your request and a self-addressed envelope with U.S. postage in care of this newspaper.)

Let's talk Fashion

With everybody sobering down to the practical problems of 1964, we've got some very practical suggestions for stretching that Christmas check in our clearance of Winter fashions. Practical but not dreary, because these are the same fashions you were drooling over at Thanksgiving but felt you couldn't afford just before Christmas. Well, now you can.

And having lured you in with bargains, we'll tempt you with bargains of another kind. What price primroses and daffodils in January? That's the way our pastel coordinates look and the way you'll feel in them. Such clear, spring-washed colors that they're guaranteed to raise the morale of the whole household.

So would our silk lounging pants in heavenly shades with silk overblouses to make those long, quiet evenings you've promised yourself to spend at home as picturesque as they look in the home-decorating magazines.

Or if you're back to the club routine, how about our new Kimberlee knits in Spring shades? The perennial three-piece ones, of course, but some interesting variations in knit dresses, too. And what attractive incentives they all are to live up to those New Year's resolutions—especially the one about losing those holiday pounds.

Boat Sinks; 7 Drown

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP) — Five girls and two boys drowned and 13 adults were missing after a boat carrying a New Year's Day picnic party of 30 capsized Wednesday on a suburban lake. Divers searched for the missing.

The Green Thumb

Portable Hotbed Lauded

A PORTABLE HOTBED—One of the slickest hotbeds I've seen for home gardeners is a portable type developed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. A 6' by 6' structure, made of wood, metal tubing and sheet plastic, costs about $25 to build and weighs less than 50 pounds, making it easy to move to a suitable plot in the back yard. The hotbed also has a soil heating cable that cuts off automatically at 70 degs.

Any home gardener can make one. The frame consists of a wooden base of pine boards and covered with a truss made of ½ inch conduit piping (electricians use it). Supporting pipes reach to a ridge pole, giving the whole structure the appearance of a tiny greenhouse.

The ends and sides are made of plastic film of 4-mil thickness. Side plastic sheets can be rolled down over the tubing frame to any desired height and held taut by cords.

The side sheets are fastened to wooden strips so that they can be rolled up at the end of spring and stored in a basement to prevent summer heat damage. In fall, the side sheets can be put over the hotbed again to start plants during fall and winter.

What's the advantage of one of these hotbeds? First, you can get all-year service from this item. In summer you can use it to start cuttings from your favorite evergreens or shrubs, and in winter it can be used to protect half-hardy and tender plants.

INDOOR VINES—One of the best indoor vines you can grow is the Pothos (pronounced Patose), sometimes classified as Scindapsus. Pothos looks exactly like a yellow variegated form of Philodendron, having the same heart-shaped leaves and similar growing conditions.

Many home owners have this growing indoors and mistakenly call it a Philodendron, which is in an entirely different family. The variety Marble Queen or Silver Moon has yellow or cream streaks, making it highly prized. Pothos pictus has white spots and an attractive white edge.

Pothos will tolerate shade, but the white markings show up best in a bright room. Soil should be a mixture of sand and peat, with a bit of loam added. Avoid low temperatures (below 50 degs).

If your's gets too long, prune the vines back to desirable length. Cut the stems into 4 inch lengths and root them in water or sand. This is an item which will grow well in plain tap water.

Troubles: Rotted leaves. Due to overwatering or poor drainage. Sometimes scale pests become troublesome. Scrape off each by brushing with old toothbrush and soapy water.

THE WILT PROBLEM — What causes vegetables or flowers to wilt and die, despite the good care you give them? This trouble is due to a fungus and is known as Verticillium wilt.

It's safe to say that the fungus is found in nearly all vegetable and flower gardens, especially in soils where susceptible crops such as tomatoes, peppers, eggplants, potatoes, strawberries or raspberries have grown. Not all plants are attacked by wilt.

For example, narrow-leaved types (such as grasses, corn, etc.) are not attacked and apparently do not support the fungus in the soil. That's why it's good business to plant very susceptible crops (such as tomatoes) on land that has grown narrow-leaved crops such as onion, cereals, or grasses for a few years.

Unfortunately, since most gardeners have such a small space, it's not possible for them to rotate their crops.

Certain weeds will keep the fungus alive in the soil when non-susceptible crops are growing, so broad-leaved weeds should be eliminated.

In some cases, certain varieties are both fusarium and verticillium-resistant, and if your plants have been in a habit of wilting badly each year, it would pay you to try the resistant types, if available. As yet, there is no chemical control for either disease in the garden soil.

PLANT POLISHERS—Homeowners who grow "hard-leaved" foliage plants such as philodendrons, crotons, peperomias, and others, like to see the leaves nice and glossy and often daub the leaves weekly with plant shining and cleaning materials.

Research at state colleges find that some of these new plantshine or cleaning materials are harmful to plant growth when overused. In fact, treating house plants too often with the cleaning or shining materials will slow down their growth noticeably.

We've found that heavy applications will cause brown patches in the "skin" of some foliage plants. Once a month is plenty when it comes to adding plant-shine materials. The old-fashioned method is to wipe leaves with skim milk, but since milk contains fats it's apt to clog the pores.

Never use olive or cooking oils since these collect dust. Better still, add a few drops of glycerine on a cloth and swab the leaves with it. Glycerine puts a nice gloss on foliage plants and does not collect dust or have any side effects.

If you use any kind of polish, never use it on the underside of the leaves. There are more pores (stomates) on the underside and the plants do most of their "breathing" through the bottom of the leaves.

It's more critical to clog the bottom pores than those on top.

Question Box

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: D. R. of Stroudsburg — "Do you think there is anything to this business of sowing vegetable and flower seeds according to the moon? Last year I sowed carrot seed in the full moon stage and all I got was a lot of tops. People tell me it was the wrong time of the moon."

A lot of things go on in the light of the silvery moon, but I've never put much stock in the idea of planting according to the moon. A good many gardeners sow and plant according to various stages of the moon and they usually have bumper crops to prove that the moon has beneficial effects. There is research which might show that the moon may be helpful.

The metabolism of some organic acids is stimulated in weak blue light, of intensity and quality somewhat similar to that of full moonlight.

Since these organic acids play an important role in growth processes of plants, some believe that the moon has a stimulating effect, not only on young people but plants also. Personally, I doubt if it makes any difference at all.

Some researchers say that if there were anything to moon planting, it's due to the tidal powers of the moon itself. They say that tides occur on dry land and in the atmosphere, as well as on the seas.

A land tide will bulge the earth upward four inches in north central United States. Just how this affects growth is beyond me. I'd be pleased to hear from folks to plant by the moon.

L. E. of Portland — "I noticed small patches of cotton on the stems of our house plants. Please tell us if we can use a spray for this. We've tried several and nothing seems to touch them."

Those cottony fluffs you see are mealy bugs. Under a magnifying glass these are oval insects with cotton-like filiaments radiating in all directions from their bodies. This is a difficult pest to kill with sprays because of the waxy coating over the body. Sometimes the aerosol bombs will do a good job killing the pest, but a surer methods is to take a cotton swab and dip it in some rubbing alcohol. Then touch each cottony mass with the alcohol. This penetrates the armor and kills the pest inside. Try not getting any alcohol on the plant.

Some gardeners have good luck dipping the plant in a pail of soap suds and malathion. First, wrap aluminum foil or plastic over the soil around the pot, then turn the pot upside down and submerge the plant, in a solution of malathion, 1 tablespoon to a gallon of water.

Don't do this to hairy leaved plants unless you can dry them off quicky.

Cy Barrett Says

Criticizing Associates

By Cyrus Barrett, Jr.

DEAR CY:

At a banquet, one guest asked another, seated down the length of the table from him, "How is your new running mate at the company doing?" The reply was, "No better than at his last two jobs. Nobody expected much, anyway." I thought this was unforgivable until another guest told me he admired anyone speaking his mind. What are your feelings, Cy?

BO NEEL

DEAR BO:

Men of character can seldom be forced to attack a business subordinate, contemporary, or superior in public. Personal attack is usually considered a clue to weakness. Biggest bombblast among those bashing others in business, occurred in November. A book publisher attempted to capitalize on bringing authors Ben Hecht and Nelson ("Man With the Golden Arm") Algren together in a re-issue of Hecht's early novel "Erik Dorn." For a reported $1,000, Algren slashingly criticized Hecht's book in the introduction he wrote. Nelson Algren may have a golden arm, but Ben Hcht doesn't see the value of using it on him.

CY

DEAR CY:

How can we make a profit from the clutter in our house? Using hardware from old-fashioned wagons, my husband has made many beautiful pieces of furniture. Our entire house is stuffed with furniture he made or refinished and I am tired of it. Is there a market?

MRS. BIRCH

DEAR MRS. BIRCH:

"Interest in custom furniture, hand - made fabrics and antiques has never been higher. People are revolting against becoming digits in their private lives," according to George Masson, interior decorator with Marshall Field and Company, a leading department store. On the job, a man may be a copy of 1,400 others, but at home or play, he wants to be an individual. Government and industry (and anyone who perceives a dollar in it) are conscientiously attempting to make us exchange our names for numbers. Numberism is on the march!

Remember talk of a universal identity card, punched with each citizen's name, history, social position, serial number, health, personal habits and marital status? It's coming, but won't be much fun unless you know the code and can read the other person's card. Your husband has a waiting market if he produces top - quality young antiques and can refinish antiques for sale. If he hasn't already turned it into a lamp base, let him get on the phone. Be dialing a few numbers, he can reach either a newspaper classified ad taker, a department store, gift or furniture store, or an interior decorating shop. Classified ads give a greater spread of outlets to choose from. Calling retailers may lead directly to an excellent connection. Your husband should try both.

CY

DEAR CY:

When you sit around hotel and motel lobbies, you always meet other salesmen. To one, I confided a secret idea for simplifying salesmen's expense account records, intending to pass it along to my company. The stranger beat me to it. He told another of our salesmen, in another place he stayed, I learned later. Anyway, the idea was adopted, but the other man got all the credit. Wouldn't you think adults could keep business secrets?

QUADELY

DEAR QUADELY:

Who knows? In our technological lifetime, we may yet see frozen or dehydrated confidences. Only then, might secrets be kept. This would be a great thing for industry, where, presently, more phony expense accounts are kept than secrets.

PCM Kingsmen Trimmed, 63-47

GIRARDVILLE — Pocono Catholic Missions suffered its sixth defeat of the season here last night as Immaculate Heart of Fountain Springs scored a 63-47 triumph over the Kingsmen of Coach Joe Barbuti.

Richie Dishman pumped in 18 points for the losers while Gerald Hardy also broke into double figures with an 11-point effort.

But the Fountain Spring combine — which had four players hitting double digits — proved too much for the small Pocono Catholic combine.

Bill Coombe of Immaculate Heart shared game scoring honors with Dishman with 18 points.

The winners sipped out in front at the end of the first period, 14-11, and held a halftime lead of 30-23 which they never relinquished.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bailey Howell and Don Ohl of Detroit, Tom Gola of New York and Chet Walker of Philadelphia were added to the squads Thursday as the National Basketball Association coaches completed their teams for the 14th annual All-Star game in Boston Jan. 14.

Eight players from each division were selected for the 10-man teams last week in a poll of NBA writers and sportcasters. Only two players, centers Bill Russell of the Boston Celtics and Walt Bellamy of the Baltimore Bullets were unanimous choices. The coaches voted for the players added Thursday.

The Eastern All-Stars, in addition to Russell, are forwards Tommy Heinsohn, Celtics; Jerry Lucas, Cincinnati Royals; Len Chappell, New York Knicks, and Walker; center Wayne Embree, Royals; and guards Oscar Robertson, Royals; Hal Greer, Philadelphia 76ers; Sam Jones, Celtics, and Gola.

The Western All-Stars, besides Bellamy, are forwards Elgin Baylor, Los Angeles Lakers; Terry Dischinger, Bullets; Bob Pettit, St. Louis Hawks, and Howell; center Wilt Chamberlain, San Francisco Warriors; and guards Jerry West, Lakers; Len Wilkins, Hawks; Guy Rodgers, 76ers, and Ohl.

The East leads the West in All-Star competition, eight victories to five. The veteran of the All-Stars is Pettit, who was named to his 10th consecutive game. First timers are Lucas, Chappell and Walker.

Red Auerbach of the Celtics and Fred Schaus of the Lakers, whose teams met for the 1962-63 championship, will coach the squads.

Sports Show Set To Open In Kingston

KINGSTON — The largest sports show of its kind ever to be held in northeastern Pennsylvania is only a month away.

It's the first annual Northeastern Pennsylvania Sports, Vacation and Boat Show and it'll be held at the gigantic West Side Armory in Kingston Feb. 1 through Feb. 8.

More than 100 exhibits will be offered ranging from a large water show tank to a display of numerous fishing tackle companies.

Demand for exhibit spaces is unprecedented and has reached such proportions that only limited reservations are still available, according to Walter E. Murray, and William Marchalonis, show producer and directors.

First Time

The sports show will mark the first time such a massive endeavor has been attempted in this part of the state. Judging by early interest in the event, officials are making plans to handle some 100,000 persons during the week-long show.

Nearly two million people reside in the 16-county area comprising northeastern Pennsylvania. The show will feature exhibits to the particular tastes of most of these people.

Exhibitors will include some of the largest national enterprises in addition to top local entries. Half-price family coupons will appear shortly in each of the 43 northeastern Pennsylvania newspapers and these same tickets will be available at each exhibitor's place of business.

Bud Carlell, internationally known Australian stock whip and boomerang specialist, will serve as master of ceremonies at the show.

Trout Fishing

Many area children will get their chance to go trout fishing in the middle of winter in one of two giant tanks.

Two top dog acts featuring Willie Necker's champion Dalmatians and his German short haired retrieving team will be offered as will Flipper, star performer at the Aquarama in Philadelphia.

A 10-act all-star program will be offered on stage to augment the numerous exhibits. The acts will include a log rolling and canoe exhibition by Joe and Hank Peters, Nova Scotia guides; the Russ Dotson Diving Trio, star performers at the Atlantic City Steel Pier over the last eight years, and Happy Davis, master clown on the trampoline who is a regular performer on the Captain Kangaroo TV show.

Special attractions for the small-fry will be offered, including Dave Irwin and his tame animals—deer, bear, racccoon, eskimo huskies, etc. A famed Arctic adventurer, Dave will also present an Arctic exhibit and films.

The Aquarama will be making its first appearance in a show of this kind. It'll include a variety of porpoise, turtles, seals, sea lions, penguins and tropical fish.

Big name race drivers will appear in conjunction with a special exhibit by the U. S. Auto Race Drivers Association.

The Anthracite Dog Training Club will offer dog obedience demonstrations. The very latest in sports equipment of every conceivable variety will be on display.

Early arrivals each day at the show will be treated to bait casting, skin diving, and archery demonstrations.

Youngsters will be given a chance, free of charge, to try their hand at shooting the latest model air rifles under strict supervision.

MSG May Continue On Own TV Circuit

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If the American Broadcasting Co. goes through with its plans to drop the weekly Friday night boxing show from television, Madison Square Garden may form its own network and continue the series.

"That's a very definite possibility," Garden spokesman John F. X. Condon said Thursday.

"There's no reason why we shouldn't or couldn't. The New York Giants did it very successfully. We could do it cheaper than the big networks and make a go of it."

Condon emphasized, however, that the whole matter "is still in the talking stage. We still haven't been notified by the network of any planned change."

The contract for the weekly boxing shows extends through September, but the network recently announced that it was dropping the show, "in the new season, that is, 1964."

The network, in its announcement, said the show may be dropped as early as April, possibly to be replaced by another sports show.

"The option for renewal is in March," Condon said. "That's the reason they're talking about April. They can drop it anytime they want, but they have to pay us through September."

The weekly fight show has been a fixture since 1943 — the longest continuous sponsored show on television—and the anticipated loss of revenue has the Garden frankly concerned.

"CBS pulled out of it some time ago," Condon recalled, "and I don't know whether NBC would be interested. So what else is there?

"There's a possibility the Garden could form its own network and continue the series. I'd say it's a definite possibility. Gillette, the sponsor on ABC, doesn't want out. It's a power play by ABC, involving some commitments and a lot of money they have tied up in football."

This week's offering is a 10-round middleweight bout Friday night between Jose Torres and Jose Gonzalez, two Puerto Ricans. Torres, a member of the 1956 U.S. Olympic team, is the island's champion.

Four N.Y. Teams In Losers Club

NEW YORK (AP) — The annual year-end meeting of the New York Losers Club was held in a convenient cellar over the weekend. A quorum was present, the hockey Rangers, basketball Knicks, football Jets and the baseball Mets.

Let's listen in:

Mr. Met: I want to congratulate you all on another successful season. Last time I looked we were all in the cellar, and I'm proud of you. It shows the right loser spirit.

Mr. Ranger: I'll tell you, for me it isn't easy. The Boston Bruins are terrible. But I'm working hard and I'm almost sure to miss the playoffs again.

Mr. Jet: I had my troubles, too. There are a couple of teams in the West that I think I can beat. In the Eastern Division I'm all right. But the way Weeb Ewbank is talking I'm not so sure he wants me to stay in this club. He likes those Yankees and Giants.

Three Straight

Mr. Knick: I see the Giants won again. That's three straight. Disgusting. And with that old man at quarterback.

Mr. Met: I can't understand it. That Y. A. Tittle looks older than Amos Alonzo Stagg. All my old men hit .211. But the Giants lost the playoff to the Bears, and the Yankees lost the World Series.

Mr. Ranger: Yes, and in four straight. I didn't know that was legal.

Mr. Met: Those Dodgers didn't act like that when they were in our town. And while we are on the subject of baseball, we have a new application for membership—from the Washington Senators.

Enough Losers

Mr. Ranger: Nuts to them. We got enough losers right in this town to keep the club going. Let them join up with the Redskins and start their own club.

Mr. Knick: Furthermore, I hear the Senators have a new slogan for next year: "Off the floor in '64." That's not only lousy poetry, it's a bad attitude. You don't catch the rest of us pulling that kind of stuff.

4 Black Hawks On 'Star' Squad

NEW YORK (AP) — The Chicago Black Hawks placed four players, including goal-scoring leader Bobby Hull, on The Associated Press' National Hockey League All-Star team for the first half of the 1963-64 season Thursday.

Jean Beliveau, veteran Montreal center, was named the most valuable player and Jacques Laperriere, the Canadiens' young defenseman, was chosen the outstanding rookie.

Goalie Glenn Hall, defenseman Pierre Pilote and right winger Ken Wharram were the other Black Hawks picked for the All-Stars. Defenseman Tim Horton of the Toronto Maple Leafs and Beliveau rounded out the six-man squad selected on performances through games of Jan. 1.

Richest Golf Year Opens Today In L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—It will be Arnold Palmer against the field as the defending champion when the 38th annual Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament opens Friday, kicking off the richest season in history for the professional swingers.

Missing from the field are two of Palmer's leading adversaries Jack Nicklaus and South Africa's Gary Player.

But the field, as usual, is stocked with other outstanding pros, including United States Open champion Julius Boros. Boros has captured his share of major events but never the Los Angeles fixture.

The purse is worth $50,000 and the setting is the 6,840-yard, par 36-35-71 Rancho Golf Club, a municipal course which has its challenges but over-all isn't calculated to give the players many nightmares.

The 72-hole show winds up Monday.

Among the past winners entered is Phil Rodgers, the losing finalist in the 1963 British Open, who won the 1962 Los Angeles with a spectacular 62 in the final round.

Other former winners here, seeking a second victory, are Gene Littler, Bob Goalby, Dow Finsterwald and Tommy Bolt.

Nicklaus is still on a vacation from golf and reportedly won't resume competition until the Bing Crosby tournament later this month. Player remained at home to wait a new arrival in the family.

Lowdown On Lowe Claimed By Boston

SAN DIEGO (AP)—The American Football League's championship game Sunday is shaping up as a personal challenge for San Diego Charger halfback Paul Lowe.

The speedster from Oregon rolled up 1,010 yards rushing during the regular season and was named Comeback Player of the Year by The Associated Press.

But he was way below par in two regular season games against the Boston Patriots, champions of the AFL's Eastern Division.

While the Chargers, Western Division champs, squeaked by Boston by 17-13 and 7-6, Lowe went nowhere. He got six yards in the first game and in the second he gained four yards, lost four.

"I've got Boston figured out now," claims Lowe. He's talking about gaining 200 yards Sunday but for security reasons he isn't saying how he'll do it.

But the Patriots don't think Lowe is going anywhere—again.

"I think we've got Paul's number," said Nick Buoniconti, Patriot middle linebacker. "Tell him we're going to be keying on him."

Boston Coach Mike Holaovak, who brought his team to San Diego Wednesday night, isn't quite so candid about Boston's defensive plans.

Lincoln Explosive

"We don't expect Lowe to gain 200 yards but we're not going to key on him," said Holovak. "Key on Lowe and Lincoln will kill you."

He was referring to fullback Keith Lincoln, the AFL's fourth-ranked ball carrier, who is as explosive as Lowe.

"Our two regular season games were hard-fought contests that could have gone either way," Holovak continued. "We gave up three touchdowns in two games against San Diego and that averages out to a touchdown end a half a game.

"You average that and you'll win most of your games. If we can hold San Diego to 10 points Sunday, we'll have a good chance to beat them."

Strong Defenses

Both clubs can be expected to rely heavily again on strong defensive play but the outcome could hinge on the passing of two old pro quarterbacks, Boston's Babe Parilli and San Diego's Tobin Rote, named AFL Player of the Year.

Coach Sid Gillman of San Diego says he'll try to open up his attack. That means Lincoln and Lowe should get plenty of opportunities to roll up the yardage.

Gillman hopes Lowe runs back to his form of the 1960 AFL championship game in Houston. In that one, Lowe got 165 yards on 21 carries.

School Cagers Resume Action

STROUDSBURG — The holiday basketball layoff is over for five teams in the Pocono-Slate Belt area as action resumes tonight with one team — Pius X of Roseto — making its debut for the campaign.

The Royals of Pius X, last of the area clubs to open the hoop season, travel to Blairstown, N. J.

Coach Dale Baker's East Stroudsburg Cavaliers, winners of two games in six contests, also are on the road tonight for a meeting with Palisades in another exhibition tiff.

Eastburg, which won two of its first three games, is currently in the midst of a three-game losing streak which has come against Lehighton, Stroud Union and Nazareth.

Pen Argyl's Green Knights, all even for the season with a 3-3 mark, are on the road for a meeting with Parkland. Coach Frank Vari's club made its debut in the Lehighton-Northampton League ranks a successful one a week ago by trimming Hellertown's Panthers. The Knights also have won three of their last four contests after bowing in their first two starts.

Pocono Mountain's Cardinals, meanwhile, continue to seek their first win of the campaign when they host Notre Dame of Green Pond. The Cards have dropped all seven of their previous encounters.

In Wayne County, Wallenpaupack takes on its second conference opponent by entertaining Lake Ariel.

Suspension To End For Paul, Alex?

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP — Paul Hornung of the Green Bay Packers and Alex Karras of the Detroit Lions, suspended last year after a gambling probe, have been punished enough, the National Football League Players Association said Thursday.

It recommended the league office return the men to their teams as soon as possible.

In Miami, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle had no comment, except to say that February is the earliest possible time the cases can be reviewed. Hornung and Karras were suspended by Rozelle after an investigation of gambling on NFL games.

Punished Enough

"We feel that one year under suspension, without salary or other benefits, is sufficient punishment," said Pete Retzlaff of the Philadelphia Eagles, president of the players' group.

"Both have recognized their mistakes in judgment and have paid for them. Another year under suspension might end their careers. At their ages, it is difficult enough after one year to return to playing perfection."

Because of personal commitments, Retzlaff said he plans to step down as president in favor of somebody who can devote more time to the job. Officers will be elected Saturday.

E. S. Matmen Bow, 38-5

EAST STROUDSBURG — Powerful Hellertown crushed East Stroudsburg's wrestlers last night, 38-5, as the Panthers gained three pins, seven decisions and a draw.

Randy Heller, Cavalier 140-pounder, gained the only win for the lads of Coach Marlin Martz, scoring a 6-2 decision.

Jack Hineline, wrestling in the 135-pound class, held his opponent to a draw.

The defeat was the second in three starts for the Cavaliers.

Ranger Coach Fined $200

MONTREAL (AP)—President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League announced Thursday he has fined Coach Red Sullivan of the New York Rangers $200 for encouraging violence during a game in Montreal Dec. 12 between the Rangers and the Montreal Canadiens.

Campbell said there was a "declaration of immunity" by Sullivan to one of his players to the effect that the player personally would not have to pay any automatic fine.

Campbell said the involved players were Henri Richard of Montreal and Vic Hadfield of New York, who engaged in "a brief stick - swinging duel for which they were penalized."

Assistant GM Post To Seghi

CINCINNATI (AP) The Cincinnati Reds named Phil Seghi Thursday to the newly created position of assistant general manager and appointed Jim McGlaughlin to succeed Seghi as farm director.

Seghi, with the Reds organization since 1956, has been farm director since 1958. McLaughlin, a one-time farm director for the old St. Louis Browns and the Baltimore Orioles, has been with the Cincinnati organization since last May.

'Education Congress' Sets Records

By Robert S. Van Fleet
Chief, Ottaway News Service
(Last in a series of two articles)

WASHINGTON— There were few more dramatic advances made last year than those in Washington by a congress that is being hailed as "the Education Congress of 1963."

Faced with two new proposals —aid to the public schools and to the colleges—Congress broke new ground by adopting a $1.2 billion college construction aid bill as part of total education authorizations that went beyond $3.6 billion.

Other programs and their amounts: Medical education, $236 million; vocational programs, $581 million; extension of National Defense Education Act, $260 million; manpower retraining, $861 million; and aid to impacted areas, $527 million.

College Construction

The Higher Education Facilities Act is a program of grants and loans to public and private colleges and universities and to public junior colleges and technical institutes. The money can be used only for construction of non-religious academic facilities.

It was the inclusion of private colleges in its provisions that caused defeat of virtually the same bill in 1962. The 1963 version barred use of public money at private institutions on buildings that might have a religious purpose.

The total authorization of $1.195 billion is for a three-year period. Because aid is on a matching 2-to-1 basis, total construction of about $3 billion should take place.

Grants of $230 million in each of three years will be for construction of undergraduate facilities such as libraries or classrooms designed for the teaching of the natural or physical sciences, mathematics, foreign languages, or engineering.

A total of $145 million in grants spread over three years is to build or improve graduate schools or graduate centers sponsored by two or more institutions.

Low-interest loans of $120 million a year for three years may also be used to build graduate and undergraduate facilities.

Vocational Education

An expanded program of aid for vocational training at state and local schools will provide $60 million in 1964; $118.5 million in 1965; $177.5 million in 1966; and $225 million in subsequent years.

Funds will be allotted to the states on a population and per-capita income formula.

The program provides that New York State's aid will rise from $3.2 million this year to $3.7 million in 1964, to $7.3 million in 1965, to $10.9 million in 1966, and $13.8 million in 1967, and after.

Pennsylvania's share of the new aid will be $3.2 million in 1964, $6.3 million in 1965, $9.4 million in 1966, and $11.9 million in 1967 and after.

The new funds may be used under a broadened definition of vocational training to fit individuals for gainful employment in all occupations, including business and office occupations excluded under the old law.

Also provided is authorization for experimental work-study programs under which a student may study and hold an income-producing job in a public agency at the same time.

Another portion of the program authorizes establishment of pilot residential vocational schools for youths aged 15 to 20.

Student Loans

The National Defense Education Act (NDEA), which provides low-interest loans to students—principally those preparing to teach mathematics, science and languages — was extended for a year, carrying it into 1965.

An important part of the program is a system of forgiveness if the student works at teaching for a number of years after graduation. The new act extends benefits to teachers in federally operated schools, including those overseas.

The amount of loan money available was raised from the current $90 million a year to $125 million in 1964 and $135 million in 1965. There was also a provision for funds to permit the conclusion of programs by students who began study in either of those years.

Another feature of the new act was the increase of the ceiling on amount to students in any one institution from $250,000 to $800,000 a year.

Impacted Areas

Where a federal installation serves to increase the population and therefore swell enrollment of local public schools, federal contributions are made for construction and operations. Such aid is given to several hundred congressional districts in the nation.

Congress extended the program for two years at an estimated cost of $527 million.

Medical Schools

The Health Professions Assistance Act was the first of President Kennedy's new programs to clear Congress.

It authorized $175 million over three years in matching grants for construction or rehabilitation of medical, dental and related professional schools and $30.7 million over three years for loans to students of medicine, dentistry, and osteopathy.

Manpower Retraining

While the extension and expansion of the 1962 Manpower Development and Training Act (MDTA) is sometimes listed as action in the civil rights or labor fields, it also had important benefits for the field of education.

The bill contained total authorization of $861 million, $531 million of it new and $330 million existing, for an expanded program to help jobless illiterates and out-of-school, out-of-work youths.

A high number of those needing help in all categories are Negroes, so the program was seen as an important adjunct to the civil rights drive and was included by President Kennedy in his June 19 civil rights message. Teen-agers were also high on the list of those suffering from unemployment because of lack of training.

The basic 1962 MTA program provided weekly money allowances to those undergoing instruction to fit them with an employable skill. Some had skills no longer useful because of technological advances.

The major 1963 amendments:

1. Special training for youths 16 years old or more, with allowances of $20 a week to those from 17 to 22. This represented an expansion of the benefits program that was formerly available only to those from 19 to 21.

2. Basic literacy training in reading, writing and arithmetic for those of any age who sought training but lacked the education to undertake even simple, service-type jobs.

3. Experimental programs to assist a worker needing retraining to move from one labor market to another, expanding the fields in which he could receive training, and making it easier for him to move from a severely depressed area for work elsewhere.

Goal For 1964

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—In a yearend interview, President Arturo Illia said his government's goal in 1964 will be overcoming the economic and social difficulties facing Argentina.

More than 6.3 million veterans have obtained GI loans with a face value in excess of $56 billion.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Project Inside Proposed Tocks Area

By Robert Van Fleet
Chief, Ottaway News Service
Fourth of a Five-part Series

One of the best known developments in the Tocks Island area is called Hidden Lake in Middle Smithfield Township, Monroe County.

It may be indicative of what is happening in other similar real estate enterprises in the Delaware Valley affected by the Tocks Island Dam boom.

Of all the major developments appearing in the valley, it is probably the closest so far to the dam proposed by the Army Corps of Engineers, a dam that is expected to create a 37 mile lake reaching north to Port Jervis by 1975.

Hidden Lake is a couple of Indian arrow shots from the top of a mountain ridge that looks down on the winding Delaware River just north of the dam. Its promoters call the area a "find" and are selling third-of-an-acre lots for prices ranging up to $3,800.

Inside Recreation Line

They believe it is inside what is presently described as the Tocks Island National Recreation Area.

And it is this aspect of the development that causes one neighbor, Mrs. Nancy Shukaitis, to echo worries about real estate developments that may eventually cause the federal government to pay increased costs for acquisition of land for the recreation area.

She echoes worries expressed in October by Stroudsburg Attorney Charles R. Bensinger, president of the Water Resources Association of the Delaware River Basin.

Bensinger's Warning

Bensinger was addressing the annual meeting of his association being held jointly at Pocono Manor with the Delaware River Basin Commission, the agency established by the states of Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York and the federal government to administer the affairs of the valley.

Bensinger, seeking speedy action in Washington, said he was worried about eventual acquisition costs by the federal government and reported an upswing of real estate activity in and near the project area.

"One realtor reportedly sold 45 lots in a single weekend," he told the audience of civic and governmental leaders. "Another developer sold over $100 000 worth of land in two months."

Mrs. Shukaitis, who is acting secretary of the Monroe County Republican Committee and a member of the anti-Tocks Island Dam Committee, points out that the Hidden Lake development, now in the proposed recreation area, may be just the kind of development that will later raise acquisition costs.

Adding to Problem

She also points out that Bensinger is a director of the company that is operating the development and is contributing to the problem about which he warned. Bensinger acknowledges this association.

Mrs. Shukaitis thinks this is a conflict of interest. Bensinger says there is no conflict of interest in his positions — that he is an interested resident of the area, hoping for and helping its economic growth.

Hidden Lake is a development of Western Heritage Properties Limited, Inc., a Canadian company with its home office in Ontario and its U.S. office at 2 Wall Street, New York City.

Western Heritage, which has another development, Hemlock Farms in Pike County, took title to nearly 400 acres of land at Hidden Lake in Monroe County in July at a price of about $180,000.

Lots Sell Quickly

Ernest Cron of Stroudsburg, the company's agent at the development, reports that lots have sold quickly. He says a second development, farther up the mountain and within sight of the river, is planned.

One of the early purchasers of a lot at Hidden Lake is mildly critical of the sellers.

Oren Shively, a mailman of East Stroudsburg, says he was not informed — until he happened to ask — that his new lot would be inside the proposed recreation area.

Cron agrees that the lots being sold are inside what is presently described as the recreation area. But he points out, as do the Army Corps of Engineers, Bensinger and others who are following the government's plans, that boundary lines are not fixed.

Cron said he has been told that when final lines are drawn, officials in Washington may draw them to exclude substantial developments that could cost too much to acquire.

Bensinger also said the recreation area boundaries will probably be zig-zagged around Hidden Lake to exclude it.

Area In Doubt

Another uncertain factor is the basic question of whether the Congress will ever authorize the recreation area.

It was a pet project of the late Congressman Francis E. Walter. It was approved by President Kennedy and mentioned during his speech at Milford. Now both men are dead. The recreation area is in difficulty in Congress and may never pass.

Prospective purchasers of lots at Hidden Lake are told that even if the federal government eventually takes the development into the national recreation area and does buy up the property, they will be getting their money back.

Cron tells viewers of the property, however, that the boundary line will probably be changed. His authority for this, he says, is "Mr. Felton of the commission."

He later displayed a business card of Paul H. Felton, who works for the Water Resources Association at its office in Philadelphia.

Felton said he did not know his name was being used in connection with land sales, but agrees with the position that boundary lines will probably be drawn to exclude expensive developments.

John Quaile, public relations officer for the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers Philadelphia office, said there is no firm policy on excluding developed areas.

"We take each case separately. There is no definite policy on going around developed areas. Every instance is something special," he said.

But he confirmed that the boundaries of the National Recreation Area drawn by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers are certainly not definite lines.

Approximate Lines

"The Corps line is a tentative outline until we get funds to make a definite study. They are very uncertain and based only on approximate lines," Quaile said.

Under the National Recreation Area bill proposed by U.S. Senator Joseph Clark and the late U.S. Rep. Walter, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will first purchase the land and then turn it over to the Department of the Interior which administers recreation areas.

Bensinger views the Tocks Island project as a tremendous stimulant to the entire economy of the Pocono region.

And he argues that the Hidden Lake development will help Smithfield Township and Monroe County by increasing the assessed valuation of taxable land and buildings.

If the government takes the land and buildings, both the property owners or the township will be reimbursed for their loss of value or taxes. If the government does not take it, the property owner and the township are better off, Bensinger said.

And, Bensinger and others are quick to point out, this may be an academic question. The Congress has not authorized the national recreation area yet ,and possibly may never approve it.
